Longmont Braces Emphasizes Comprehensive Patient-Centered Orthodontic Care Approach

January 30, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - January 30, 2026 -
Longmont Braces continues to distinguish itself in Colorado orthodontics by maintaining a comprehensive, patient-centered approach that addresses both traditional orthodontic needs and advanced treatment options for patients of all ages.

The Longmont-based orthodontic practice, led by Dr. Stephanie Ross and Dr. Aden Peterson, offers a full spectrum of orthodontic services ranging from traditional metal and clear braces to Invisalign clear aligners, surgical orthodontics, and specialized two-phase treatments. The practice emphasizes individualized treatment planning that considers each patient's unique goals, lifestyle, and clinical needs.

"Every patient who walks through our doors has distinct orthodontic needs and personal preferences," said Dr. Stephanie Ross, orthodontist at the practice. "Our commitment extends beyond simply straightening teeth to encompass comprehensive dentofacial orthopedics, ensuring optimal facial development and long-term stability of results."

The practice's service offerings reflect current orthodontic advancements, including Temporary Anchorage Devices (TADs) for enhanced treatment efficiency and surgical orthodontics for complex cases requiring jaw correction. Two-phase treatment programs address both tooth alignment and facial development in younger patients, maximizing the opportunity for ideal functional and aesthetic outcomes.

Beyond traditional treatment modalities, the practice has established itself as an Invisalign specialist, providing clear aligner therapy for both teenagers and adults seeking discreet orthodontic solutions. The integration of multiple treatment options allows the orthodontists to customize approaches based on individual patient circumstances, age considerations, and treatment complexity.

The practice also maintains emergency orthodontic services to address urgent patient needs, demonstrating their commitment to comprehensive care availability. This service ensures patients experiencing orthodontic emergencies receive prompt attention and treatment, minimizing discomfort and preventing potential complications.

Dentofacial orthopedics represents another key component of the practice's service portfolio, particularly for pediatric patients. This specialized approach guides facial growth and development during childhood, often working in conjunction with traditional orthodontic treatment to address jaw and facial irregularities alongside dental alignment.

The orthodontic team provides extensive patient education regarding treatment options, life with braces, and post-treatment care. New patients receive thorough consultations to discuss treatment possibilities, timeline expectations, and financial considerations. The practice has streamlined the new patient process through accessible forms and information resources, facilitating smooth transitions into orthodontic care.

Longmont Braces serves the Longmont, Colorado community and surrounding areas with orthodontic expertise spanning routine to complex cases. The practice combines clinical excellence with personalized patient care, offering multiple treatment pathways to achieve optimal orthodontic outcomes. Their approach integrates traditional orthodontic principles with contemporary techniques and technologies, ensuring patients receive care aligned with current best practices in orthodontics.
