Reliable Acorn Announces Free Marketing Assessment to Help Businesses Navigate Shift from SEO to GEO

January 09, 2026

January 09, 2026 -
Reliable Acorn LLC, a Charlotte-based internet marketing consulting firm, announced today the launch of a comprehensive free marketing assessment to help businesses evaluate their current marketing effectiveness and adapt to the evolving landscape of search technology, including the transition from traditional SEO to Generative Engine Optimization (GEO).

The assessment addresses growing concerns among business owners about the impact of artificial intelligence and learned language models on their marketing strategies. As businesses grapple with measuring the effectiveness of AI-driven traffic sources and understanding how these new technologies affect their customer acquisition, the Charlotte firm has developed a data-driven approach to help companies make informed decisions without falling prey to industry hype or speculation.

"Businesses are understandably confused about how AI and learned language models are changing the marketing landscape," said David Zimmerman, founder of Reliable Acorn. "While everyone is talking about AI replacing traditional search, the reality is that the same fundamentals that make SEO work also help AI engines find and promote businesses. The key is understanding how to measure and attribute leads from these new sources."

The free assessment evaluates multiple aspects of a company's digital marketing presence, including web analytics configuration, lead attribution accuracy, and the effectiveness of current SEO efforts across traditional search engines and emerging AI platforms. The service focuses on helping businesses reconcile data from multiple marketing sources, ensure lead-quality tracking, and distinguish between returning customers and new prospects.

A critical component of the assessment addresses the complexity of modern lead attribution. With customers often interacting with businesses through multiple touchpoints before making a purchase, including AI chatbots, traditional search results, and local service ads, determining which marketing channel deserves credit has become increasingly challenging. The assessment helps businesses establish proper tracking mechanisms to understand their true marketing ROI.

The announcement comes as the company introduces specialized marketing packages tailored for small businesses, recognizing that this segment has often been underserved or taken advantage of by marketing companies that make unrealistic promises. The new offerings include transparent pricing, clear deliverables, and a focus on building lasting digital assets that belong to the client.

"Businesses need marketing solutions that work within their constraints of time and budget," added Zimmerman. "They deserve transparency about what they're getting and realistic expectations about results. That's why every engagement starts with understanding their specific situation through this assessment."

The assessment process begins with a discovery call to understand the business's current marketing challenges and goals. Following the initial consultation, the company provides a detailed analysis of the business's digital marketing effectiveness, including specific recommendations for improvement. Businesses receive insights into their Google Analytics configuration, cross-channel consistency, and integration opportunities with sales and CRM tools.
