

Root Canal Treatment Pimlico Victoria London Consultations Now Available at McKennell Dental Practice

January 16, 2026

LONDON, UK - January 16, 2026 -
McKennell Dental Practice has announced the availability of consultation appointments for patients requiring root canal treatment. The update reflects the practice's provision of restorative dental care for individuals experiencing problems with infected or damaged tooth pulp. Appointments have been opened for those needing assessment for root canal procedures in the Pimlico and Victoria area of London.

Root canal treatment is a dental procedure used to save a tooth that has become infected or badly damaged. The treatment involves removing the infected or inflamed pulp from inside the tooth, cleaning and disinfecting the root canals, then filling and sealing the space to prevent further infection. According to the announcement, root canal treatment can prevent the need for tooth extraction and allows patients to keep their natural tooth. The pulp is the soft tissue inside the tooth that contains nerves, blood vessels, and connective tissue. When this becomes infected due to deep decay, repeated dental procedures on the tooth, or a crack or chip, it can cause severe pain and lead to abscess formation if left untreated.

The practice noted that root canal treatment is often required when tooth decay reaches the inner pulp, when a tooth suffers trauma, or when infection develops. Symptoms that may indicate the need for root canal treatment include persistent toothache, prolonged sensitivity to hot or cold, discolouration of the tooth, swelling and tenderness in nearby gums, or a recurring pimple on the gums. Not all teeth with these symptoms will require root canal treatment, which is why proper assessment during consultation is essential.

McKennell Dental Practice has confirmed that the consultation process begins with a thorough examination of the affected tooth. The dental team takes X-rays to assess the extent of infection and to view the shape of the root canals.

Consultations at McKennell Dental Practice include a discussion about what root canal treatment involves and what patients can expect during the procedure. The dental team explains that the treatment is typically carried out under local anaesthetic, so patients should not feel pain during the procedure. Most root canal treatments can be completed in one or two appointments, depending on the complexity of the case. During the procedure, the dentist creates an opening in the tooth to access the pulp chamber, removes the infected or damaged pulp, cleans and shapes the root canals, then fills them with a rubber-like material. A temporary filling is placed to close the opening, and a permanent crown or filling is usually fitted at a subsequent appointment to protect the tooth.

The practice has indicated that following root canal treatment, the tooth may feel sensitive for a few days as the surrounding tissues heal. Patients receive advice on managing any discomfort and are informed about signs of complications that would require further attention. The consultation covers aftercare instructions and the importance of maintaining good oral hygiene to protect the treated tooth.

The announcement comes as part of the practice's broader provision of dental care for patients in Pimlico, Victoria, and surrounding areas of central London. McKennell Dental Practice offers various treatments including routine examinations, fillings, tooth extractions, dental hygiene appointments, and cosmetic dentistry options. The practice operates privately, with treatment costs discussed clearly during consultations. Each patient receives a treatment plan tailored to their individual needs and circumstances.

According to the release, the availability of root canal treatment consultations reflects the practice's commitment to helping patients preserve their natural teeth wherever possible. The clinic noted that root canal treatment has a high success rate and can allow a tooth to function normally for many years following the procedure. Consultations provide an opportunity for the dental team to assess each case individually and determine the most appropriate course of action.

The practice accepts new private patients for both urgent and routine dental care. The dental team works to ensure patients understand their treatment options and feel informed about the procedures being recommended. Treatment plans take into account the patient's overall dental health, their preferences, and any concerns they may have about the proposed treatment.
