

HHI Windows and Doors Expands Services with Egress Window Replacements to Meet Safety and Code Standards

January 16, 2026

BLUFFTON, SC - January 16, 2026 -

To meet increased local demand for renovations that comply with modern building codes, HHI Windows and Doors has expanded its services, adding egress window replacements.

The window and door replacement company based in Hilton Head Island expressed that egress windows have gained growing importance across the residential housing sector as both safety devices and regulatory requirements. Modern building codes now require emergency escape and rescue openings capable of meeting specific size and accessibility standards.

According to HHI Windows and Doors, this has prompted many homeowners to undertake remodeling and replacement of their spaces, installing safety features such as egress windows. For many, replacement egress windows serve as the most practical solution to address these compliance issues.

Industry research and safety reports have shown that egress windows play a central role in emergency preparedness, particularly in basement areas where traditional exit routes may be limited. These windows provide a secondary path for both occupants and first responders. Greater enforcement of building code standards in South Carolina and neighboring states has contributed to more homeowners seeking replacement services. This trend has encouraged companies like HHI Windows and Doors to strengthen their offerings in order to align with current standards and address safety-driven demand.

The addition of replacement egress windows into the HHI Windows and Doors service range is expected to support the growing number of homeowners investing in basement remodeling, rental property conversions, and additions of lower-level living areas. In many instances, older windows are too small, improperly located, or unable to meet current standards for accessibility and clearance. HHI Windows and Doors is responding directly to these challenges that homeowners encounter during property upgrades.

The window replacement firm highlighted that the benefits of proper egress window installations extend beyond compliance. The company noted, ?In most cases, replacement projects have enhanced interior spaces by increasing light penetration and ventilation, making them more suitable for everyday use.? These improvements have been particularly valuable for homeowners repurposing basements and previously underutilized areas into comfortable living quarters.

HHI Windows and Doors likewise pointed out that energy efficiency has also become a consideration in these updates, with modern windows offering improved insulation compared to older designs.

?As property owners continue to focus on modernization and safety, the availability of updated window systems is expected to remain a consistent priority,? says HHI Windows and Doors.

HHI Windows and Doors was established in 2010 and has been locally owned and family-operated ever since. Over the years, HHI Windows and Doors has provided professional window and door installation and replacement services, along with a variety of customized options. They have served clients throughout Beaufort and Jasper Counties in South Carolina, as well as in Georgia.

Headquartered in Hilton Head Island, HHI Windows and Doors also operates a Bluffton showroom that provides flexible financing options, including Hearth financing. Hearth is a third-party platform that allows homeowners and businesses to pre-qualify without affecting their credit scores and access funds quickly.

?We take pride in our work to showcase that every product we install enhances the comfort, security, and energy efficiency of our customers? homes,? says Richard Barron, owner of HHI Windows and Doors.
