Just 4 Kids Preschool Highlights Play-Based Learning in Early Childhood Education at Corona Location

January 26, 2026

CORONA, CA - January 26, 2026 -
Just 4 Kids Preschool emphasizes play-based learning in early childhood education as a foundational approach at its Corona location, reflecting a widely recognized method in the field of early childhood development. This approach integrates structured play activities that allow young children to engage in exploration and interaction under the guidance of experienced educators across daily routines supporting consistency, engagement, and continuity for children through familiar schedules that promote comfort, participation, and steady developmental progress.

Play-based learning in early childhood education involves children participating in purposeful activities that encourage creativity, problem-solving, and social engagement. In settings like the Corona facility, educators facilitate environments where children explore learning centers focused on role-playing, imaginative play, and hands-on experiences. These activities support social and emotional growth through interactions with peers and adults, while also fostering cognitive skills through discovery and experimentation. Outdoor spaces provide opportunities for physical play, including climbing, riding tricycles, and sensory exploration in areas such as sand zones.

Educators play a key role in guiding play-based learning by observing children's interests and scaffolding activities to align with developmental stages. This guided play balances child-initiated exploration with intentional adult support, ensuring experiences remain age-appropriate and engaging. The method aligns with broader discussions in early childhood education about the value of play as a primary vehicle for learning, where children build foundational skills through meaningful interactions rather than direct instruction alone.

Kecia Loving, Director at the Just 4 Kids Preschool Corona location, notes the importance of this approach in daily practice. "The simple magic of play allows children to learn, laugh, and grow in ways that create lasting impressions," Loving said. "Educators observe how play supports everyday learning experiences, helping children develop through exploration and interaction."

Rocio Hernandez, Assistant Director at the Corona location, adds perspective on the role of professional guidance. "Guided play provides opportunities for children to interact, explore, and build connections in a supportive environment," Hernandez said. "Early childhood educators facilitate these experiences to nurture holistic development in a natural and engaging manner."

Play-based learning remains a prominent topic in early childhood education, with ongoing conversations among professionals about how structured play contributes to children's overall growth. This method supports social-emotional development through collaborative activities, encourages cognitive growth via problem-solving in play scenarios, and promotes physical coordination through active movement. The approach recognizes that young children learn most effectively when engaged in activities that feel joyful and self-directed, with educators providing gentle direction to extend learning.

At the Corona location, Just 4 Kids Preschool applies this established approach across its infant and preschool programs, creating spaces where play serves as a central component of the daily routine. The facility's design includes indoor and outdoor areas that facilitate various types of play, enabling children to participate in activities that promote interaction and discovery.

Just 4 Kids Preschool operates multiple locations in Southern California, serving infants through school-age children with a whole-child, research-based curriculum that integrates social, emotional, academic, and physical development. Family-owned by Alvin and Joy Ayusa, the organization maintains a commitment to creating nurturing environments that reflect core values of trust, respect, fun, passion, and integrity. With experienced leadership and staff focused on quality early care, Just 4 Kids Preschool continues to support families and communities through consistent educational practices centered on child-led exploration and guided learning experiences.
