March 31, 2016 -
Chedall LLC, a business with headquarters in the U.S.A, is proud to announce the launch of the new campfire travel website that they have listed. They have also included a new free e-magazine for tablets, which includes details of competitions, special offers and more. Furthermore, the company is in the process of developing a mobile app, which will be released very soon. Chedall is very proud of what they have been able to do with Campfire Travel and are happy to hear that users are equally pleased.

David Ball from Chedall says: "We are incredibly pleased with the website that we have designed for our new clients, Campfiretravel.com. We have a personal passion for camping ourselves, so this was a dream project for us. We're really pleased with the results and happy to see it is being so well received."

One of the aims of the new website is to provide people with information about campsites, outdoor adventures and more. They also regularly feature competitions and special offers, which enable more people to get the most out of their camping trips. Furthermore, it includes a campfire travel directory, where people can find information about the best campsites near them, or at a chosen destination.

The e-magazine is also proving to be very popular. It is filled with information about camping and campsites, but also provides hints and tips on how to get the most out of a camping expedition. In so doing, the company ensures that people can enjoy their trips, but to do so in a safe and sustainable manner.

Besides the e-magazine and the soon to be released mobile app, the site also includes a campfire travel social website. "We wanted to give people with a passion for camping an opportunity to share information together and talk to each other," adds David Ball. "The community is growing really quickly, with people sharing their own stories and providing advice and guidance to others when asked. We're really happy to see just how popular this is becoming."

Those who sign up for the newsletter will also be automatically entered in monthly prize draws.
