

Bone Dry Roofing Now Offering Roofing Services in Punta Gorda

January 27, 2026

PORT CHARLOTTE, FL - January 27, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bone Dry Roofing has announced that it now offers roofing services in Punta Gorda, identifying the city as a distinct area of operation within its broader Florida service region. While crews have completed projects in and around the area previously, the formal inclusion of Punta Gorda within the company's service map marks a clearer commitment to its coverage.

The update comes as part of an internal review of service boundaries aimed at making geographic availability easier to understand for customers and contractors. With Punta Gorda now explicitly listed among locations served, residents can more easily verify their eligibility for roofing services without additional inquiry.

According to Marcy Petricig Braasch, a representative for Bone Dry Roofing, the move reflects actual work patterns and logistical planning already in place. "This is not a change in direction but rather a clearer articulation of where we've already been working," Braasch said. "We've provided roofing services throughout this region, and Punta Gorda has consistently been part of that effort."

The newly designated service area includes residential neighborhoods and commercial properties within city limits and surrounding areas. While no new facility or office has been established in Punta Gorda itself, the company has adjusted its customer-facing materials to ensure that residents are aware of their inclusion in the service zone.

Clarifying geographic coverage helps streamline the process for residents seeking services such as roof inspections, repairs, maintenance, and replacements. It also improves coordination by aligning customer expectations with internal scheduling and dispatch procedures.

The addition of Punta Gorda to the company's public-facing materials reflects an emphasis on transparency and accessibility. By naming specific cities within its coverage, Bone Dry Roofing aims to eliminate any uncertainty for residents trying to determine whether roofing services are available in their area.

Braasch noted that Florida's climate and construction styles create region-specific challenges, and Punta Gorda is no exception. "The conditions here are unique to coastal communities, and we've developed approaches that reflect that," she said. "Making Punta Gorda a named service area allows us to be more precise in how we communicate with customers who live there."

Residents in Punta Gorda who have previously worked with the company will see no change in service delivery. The announcement is not tied to any expansion of operations or pricing adjustments but simply provides a reference point for those unfamiliar with the company's existing presence in the area.

The update also supports planning for ongoing service needs in a region where seasonal weather and long-term wear can both contribute to roofing concerns. Identifying Punta Gorda as a coverage area helps with the coordination of future projects by aligning geographic data with established routes and job histories.

The company regularly reviews its service coverage to ensure public information remains consistent with operational activity. Punta Gorda was identified as a location where roofing services have been routinely provided, leading to its designation as a named service area based on established patterns of work and regional demand.

While the company maintains multiple service zones throughout Florida, each location is considered individually based on activity levels and service consistency. The Punta Gorda listing helps reduce ambiguity for homeowners, property managers, and contractors trying to determine whether the company serves their address.

The Punta Gorda service area is now clearly marked within the company's online materials, providing an easy reference for those seeking assistance. No changes have been made to service terms, timelines, or cost structures in relation to this update.

Braasch explained that listing Punta Gorda as a service area is a clarification rather than a change. The adjustment ensures that residents in the area have a clearer understanding of the services available to them and how to confirm coverage when planning roofing projects.
