January 27, 2026

PORT CHARLOTTE, FL - January 27, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bone Dry Roofing has announced that it is now offering roof repair services in Punta Gorda, making it easier for residents in the area to access support for maintaining the integrity of their homes. The clarification of service availability reflects ongoing activity in the region and provides a more accurate reference for homeowners dealing with common roofing issues.

The decision to list Punta Gorda as a specific location for roof repair services follows a review of completed projects and customer inquiries within the area. By clearly identifying roof repair as an available service, Bone Dry Roofing aims to eliminate uncertainty for property owners seeking timely assistance with repairing roofs under a range of conditions.

Marcy Petricig Braasch, a representative for Bone Dry Roofing, noted that this clarification brings public-facing information in line with day-to-day operations. "We've been working in Punta Gorda for quite some time," she said. "By formally identifying roof repair as a named service, we're helping residents know where they can turn when roofing issues arise."

The updated information is now reflected in the company's Punta Gorda service materials, allowing homeowners to confirm whether roof repair services are available at their address. While the announcement does not involve a new office or facility opening in the area, it does indicate that the company is actively repairing roofs within city limits and nearby neighborhoods.

Roof repair needs can vary widely depending on weather, age of materials, and structural conditions. Common service requests include addressing roof leaks, replacing damaged shingles or tiles, fixing flashing, and making repairs following storm-related impacts. In Punta Gorda, exposure to coastal weather can accelerate the need for maintenance, and the service clarification supports efficient scheduling and site evaluation.

Braasch emphasized that this is not a new service offering, but rather a formal acknowledgment of the work already taking place in the area. "Repairing roofs has long been part of what we do in Southwest Florida," she said. "The update simply makes that fact more visible to the people who need those services most."

Identifying Punta Gorda as an area where roof repair is available also supports internal operations, including job routing and regional planning. The company routinely evaluates where its teams are most active, and updates service descriptions accordingly to ensure the public has access to current and accurate information.

Residents in Punta Gorda who have previously scheduled roof repairs with the company will experience no change in process or service scope. For those reaching out for the first time, the updated materials make it easier to determine whether their needs fall within the company's established service zone.

The company's approach to repairing roofs in Punta Gorda is informed by experience with Florida-specific materials and climate conditions. Roof systems in coastal regions often face elevated exposure to moisture, wind, and heat, which can lead to accelerated wear. Understanding these environmental factors is part of what guides how the company manages its roof repair work in the area.

No pricing or policy changes are associated with this announcement. The update is intended solely to improve clarity and communication with the public. The goal is to make it easier for homeowners to identify available services and understand whether a provider is currently operating in their community.

The roof repair designation for Punta Gorda is now included on the company's website and service area reference materials. Bone Dry Roofing will continue to monitor its service boundaries and make updates as needed to reflect actual patterns of work.

Braasch noted that keeping customers informed remains a central focus. "We want to be clear about where we're working and what services are available," she said. "Repairing roofs in Punta Gorda has always been part of our operations?now it?s easier for people to see that.?
