

Cali Bath and Kitchen Expands Accessory Dwelling Unit Services Across San Diego County

January 29, 2026

San Diego, CA - January 29, 2026 -
Cali Bath and Kitchen, a family-owned general contractor based in San Diego, California, announced the expanded availability of its Accessory Dwelling Unit services to homeowners throughout San Diego County and nearby areas. The service is now being formally introduced to residents across La Mesa, Carlsbad, Poway, El Cajon, Chula Vista, Del Mar, Coronado, Fairbanks Ranch, and Encinitas, reflecting continued regional demand for flexible residential living solutions.

Accessory Dwelling Units, often referred to as ADUs, have become an increasingly practical option for homeowners seeking additional living space within existing property boundaries. Local housing pressures, rising property values, and changing household needs have accelerated interest in these secondary units. Cali Bath and Kitchen?s announcement signals a broader commitment to supporting homeowners navigating this shift while maintaining compliance with city and state building standards.

Founded in 2016, Cali Bath and Kitchen has built its reputation through kitchen renovations, bathroom upgrades, interior renovations, and design-focused construction services. The expansion of ADU availability builds upon the company?s established experience with structural planning, construction permits, plumbing, electrical systems, flooring, cabinetry, waterproofing, tile installation, and finish work. By offering this service across more communities, the company aims to provide consistent project execution for homeowners who want additional usable space without having to relocate.

Accessory Dwelling Units (ADU) can serve a range of purposes depending on household needs. In some cases, they provide long-term housing for extended family members. In others, they serve as independent living areas for adult children, home offices, guest suites, or rental units that contribute to household income. Local municipalities throughout San Diego County have updated zoning and development regulations in recent years, making ADUs more accessible when properly planned and approved.

Cali Bath and Kitchen?s approach to ADU development emphasizes careful planning and structured project management. Each project begins with a review of property conditions, zoning requirements, and building codes specific to the city where the home is located. While not all interior conversions require permits, most garage conversions and detached units in San Diego County do. The company?s experienced crew manages the permitting process from submission through approval, coordinating with local building departments and inspectors to help avoid delays.

Construction is handled by specialized, well-trained crews assigned to each phase of the project. This includes demolition, framing, plumbing, electrical work, insulation, drywall, tile installation, cabinetry, flooring, painting, and final detailing. By relying on dedicated in-house teams rather than rotating outside contractors, the company maintains continuity and accountability throughout the build.

Design flexibility remains a central component of the service. Layouts are developed based on how the space will be used, allowing for customization that reflects the homeowner?s priorities. Some clients prefer open-concept designs with open shelving to enhance flow and natural light. Others request adjustments, such as lowering the microwave placement to support accessibility or raising the installation for added safety. These decisions are addressed during the planning stage to ensure the finished space aligns with daily routines and activities.

Project timelines vary based on scope, size, and permitting requirements. Interior renovations tied to ADU development are scheduled with coordination across trades to reduce disruption. For reference, a full bathroom remodel typically takes between two and four weeks, while complete ADU construction timelines are established after design approval and permit issuance. Limiting active projects allows the company to maintain steady progress and consistent communication.

Yoseph Z, project manager and business representative for Cali Bath and Kitchen, stated that the service expansion directly responds to regional housing needs. ?Homeowners across San Diego County are looking for practical ways to maximize their space without leaving their neighborhoods,? said Yoseph Z. ?Accessory Dwelling Units offer flexibility when they are planned correctly. The goal is to guide families through the process with clear expectations, skilled crews, and a structured approach that respects local requirements.?

Beyond space planning, ADUs can influence property usability over time. As household needs change, these units allow homes to adapt without large-scale relocation or repeated interior modifications. In multi-generational households, separate living areas can support privacy while keeping families connected. For homeowners focused on long-term planning, ADUs can serve as adaptable spaces that evolve with changes in lifestyle.

Cali Bath and Kitchen?s expansion also reflects broader development trends within San Diego neighborhoods, where single-family properties are increasingly being reconfigured to support additional dwelling space. With median home prices remaining high and rental demand steady, ADUs have emerged as a practical response within existing residential zones. The company?s service availability across multiple cities ensures consistent construction standards while adapting to local regulations.

As a service-area-based general contractor, Cali Bath and Kitchen operates throughout the county while maintaining its headquarters in San Diego. The company limits the number of active projects at any given time to help ensure reliable scheduling and clear communication. Homeowners work directly with the project manager and crew leaders, enabling direct oversight and informed decision-making throughout the construction process.

The expanded Accessory Dwelling Unit service is now available to homeowners in San Diego, La Mesa, Carlsbad, Poway, El Cajon, Chula Vista, Del Mar, Coronado, Fairbanks Ranch, and Encinitas. Additional information about planning considerations, permitting processes, and construction timelines can be found through the company?s official channels.

Cali Bath and Kitchen continues to focus on interior renovations, kitchen updates, bathroom improvements, and residential construction projects that support functional living spaces. The ADU service expansion represents the latest step in addressing evolving housing needs across the San Diego region while maintaining a structured, compliance-focused approach to residential development.
