January 30, 2026 -

The Pope Firm Johnson City has announced expanded bankruptcy consultation services to address the growing number of Tennessee residents struggling with overwhelming medical bills and educational loan obligations. The Johnson City-based bankruptcy law firm reports an increase in consultations from individuals seeking relief from multiple debt sources that have become unmanageable in the current economic environment.

The firm, which has served the Johnson City community for over 25 years, offers comprehensive bankruptcy solutions including Chapter 7, Chapter 11, and Chapter 13 filings. These services have become increasingly relevant as Tennessee residents face mounting financial challenges from unexpected medical expenses combined with existing student loan obligations.

The firm provides free 20-minute consultations to evaluate each client's unique financial situation. During these consultations, attorneys review the client's debt portfolio, income, assets, and long-term financial goals to determine the most appropriate course of action. This may include filing for bankruptcy protection or exploring alternative debt management strategies.

"Medical debt remains one of the leading causes of personal bankruptcy filings in Tennessee, and when combined with student loan obligations, many individuals find themselves in an impossible financial situation," said Charles Pope, founding attorney at The Pope Firm. "Our role as a bankruptcy attorney Johnson City is to help clients understand their options and find a path forward that allows them to regain financial stability."

The firm's expanded services come at a time when medical debt affects millions of Americans. Recent data indicate that medical bills are involved in approximately 66 percent of personal bankruptcy filings nationwide. In Tennessee, where The Pope Firm operates, the combination of medical expenses and existing student loans creates particularly challenging financial circumstances for many residents.

The Pope Firm specializes in various aspects of bankruptcy law, including automatic stay provisions that immediately stop creditor harassment, foreclosure proceedings, and wage garnishment. The firm also assists clients with understanding the means test, which determines eligibility for Chapter 7 bankruptcy, and helps small business owners navigate business bankruptcy options.

"We see clients from all walks of life who never expected to face bankruptcy," added Pope. "A serious illness or injury can quickly deplete savings and max out credit cards, especially when someone is already managing student loan payments. Our goal is to provide these individuals with a fresh start and the tools they need to rebuild their financial lives."

Student Debt Consolidation remains a critical concern for many clients seeking bankruptcy protection. While student loans typically cannot be discharged through bankruptcy except in cases of undue hardship, The Pope Firm helps clients restructure their overall debt burden to make student loan payments more manageable. This approach often involves eliminating other unsecured debts through bankruptcy, freeing up resources to address educational loans.

Based in Johnson City, Tennessee, The Pope Firm has established itself as a dedicated bankruptcy law practice serving individuals and businesses throughout the region. The firm provides comprehensive bankruptcy solutions and debt elimination strategies, having helped thousands of clients regain financial freedom over its decades of service.
