

Minneapolis Commercial Interior Design Firm Applies Reuse And Reinvent Strategy For Sustainable Design

April 05, 2016

April 05, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

PureAlchemy Design, based in Minneapolis, Minnesota, has announced a new realm of commercial design services that focus on a reuse and reinvent strategy that delivers a new generation of sustainable design. The design firm offers a wide range of workplace design options for Minneapolis based businesses. Principal designer Stephany Eaton states, "Our goal is to create a distinctive branded environment, employing a sustainable approach. We can repurpose your existing pieces and reinvent them in new ways to make your space functional as well as memorable."

Stephany Eaton obtained her degree in Chemistry from the University of Minnesota, followed by a Graduate Certificate in Sustainable Design from Boston Architectural College, and she is an accredited LEED Green Associate. She states that the entire design company works to provide clients with smart and sustainable design that would be better for the environment while providing the benefits of savings and functionality that businesses need.

The company specializes in commercial interior design, helping business owners to maximize the spaces in their buildings, while providing the atmosphere that they want for their clients or customers. Eaton says that they focus on up-cycling or reusing pieces already in the existing design, while giving them new function and a new look. For example, elements from older buildings can be creatively repurposed to infuse a contemporary vibe while serving a new purpose. This approach makes for unique spaces that showcase in a high-end way while making the best use of the budget.

The company states that those interested in learning more about their Minneapolis workplace design options should contact them to schedule a consultation. Those who would like to learn more can also visit the design firm on their official website, where a portfolio of previous works is available.

Eaton says that by reusing existing pieces, businesses can not only save money and help to protect the environment. She feels strongly that everyone should consider recycling and that her design firm can help businesses to find new and more useful ways of using furnishings that may at the moment seem outdated or redundant.

The design firm focuses on smart design, ensuring that the final outcome offers sustainability as well as creativity and productivity. Those who are interested in scheduling a consultation with the Minneapolis based commercial design company can contact them through their official website.

###

For more information about PUREALCHEMY DESIGN, contact the company here: PUREALCHEMY DESIGN
Stephany Eaton (612) 386-5154
Stephany@PureAlchemyDesign.com
Minneapolis, MN

PUREALCHEMY DESIGN

PureAlchemy Design creates meaningful and distinctive commercial space environments that bring joy to those who experience them.

Areas of Work:

Commercial Interior Design

Retail & Showroom Design

Workplace Design

Website: <http://purealchemydesign.com/>

Email: Stephany@PureAlchemyDesign.com

Phone: (612) 386-5154

