Anonymous VPN Service, based in Jacksonville, Florida, has published an updated review of IPVanish, which is designed to help consumers protect their online identity. Genevieve Peterson wrote the review, titled "IPVanish Review - Does It Protect Your Online Identity?" Peterson gave the program 4.5 out of 5 stars and states, "IPVanish is relatively new, but has already gained mass popularity. I thought it would be good to offer an unbiased opinion of the program, for those who are straddling the fence on whether or not to purchase it."

The review can be seen at <http://www.anonymousvpnservice.com/ipvanish-review-does-it-protect-your-online-identity/>. It offers insights into the program regarding cost and effectiveness. It also refers to the program as a tool that will help to protect consumers' every move made online. Peterson says, "It really does offer complete and total protection, as well as full online anonymity."

The review states that IPVanish provides a ridiculously high level of protection, and explains why this is important. Peterson says in the review that using the program, consumers will be nearly impossible to track because IPVanish uses a global network of VPNs that are hosted all over the globe, which in turn causes any internet actions to be bounced around an almost infinite number of servers. More about how the program works can be seen at <http://www.anonymousvpnservice.com/what-is-a-personal-vpn-used-for-and-do-you-need-one/>.

The review also states that the program provides a government grade level of encryption, which makes it impossible for anyone to gauge the whereabouts of its user. Peterson then goes on to state that all of the protection is available instantly when users purchase the software upon signup.

One of the main benefits of the program, according to Peterson's review, is its price. The review points out that with just a few dollars per month, it includes protection through more than 225 servers located in over 60 different countries around the world. Peterson says that the cost, as well as the fact that those purchasing get everything they need for one price, makes this a worthy program.
