February 26, 2026 -
AAA Storage of Highland, a locally owned storage provider serving the Inland Empire, announces enhanced online capabilities and unit availability ahead of the spring 2026 storage season. The self-storage facility in Highland, CA, has streamlined its digital services to provide customers with improved online navigation, reservation systems, and payment options as demand for storage solutions traditionally increases during the spring moving season.

The facility's updated website now offers comprehensive online bill payment functionality alongside simplified unit reservation processes, allowing customers to manage their storage needs remotely. This digital enhancement comes as the facility prepares for the anticipated seasonal increase in storage demand that typically accompanies spring relocations, home renovations, and decluttering projects throughout CA and the surrounding region.

"The spring season consistently brings increased demand for storage solutions as residents undertake moves, home improvement projects, and seasonal transitions," said Donald Nordine, facility manager at AAA Storage of Highland. "Our enhanced online platform allows customers to explore available unit sizes, compare options, and complete their rental process efficiently, while our ample unit availability ensures we can accommodate various storage needs during this busy period."

AAA Storage of Highland maintains a diverse inventory of storage units ranging from 5x7 closet-sized spaces to 10x20 garage-sized units, accommodating everything from household items and seasonal decorations to furniture and business inventory. The facility also provides automobile storage options for cars, motorcycles, and recreational vehicles, addressing the varied storage requirements of Highland area residents and businesses.

The facility's security infrastructure includes gated access control, perimeter fencing, and continuous camera monitoring, with professional on-site management overseeing daily operations. These security measures remain integral to the facility's operations as it prepares for increased activity during the upcoming storage season.

"We recognize that convenience and accessibility are essential factors for our customers when selecting storage solutions," added Nordine. "The combination of our enhanced digital services and maintained unit availability positions us to serve both new and existing customers effectively as they plan their spring storage needs."

The facility continues to offer specialized pricing programs for active-duty military personnel, seniors, and students, along with a referral reward program that provides existing tenants with one month of free rent for successful new customer referrals. These programs remain available to customers utilizing both online and in-person rental processes.

As a locally owned operation, AAA Storage of Highland has established itself as an award-winning storage provider within the Inland Empire region. The facility serves residents across Highland, San Bernardino, Redlands, and surrounding communities, offering both short-term and long-term storage solutions for personal and business applications. The combination of varied unit sizes, vehicle storage options, and flexible rental terms enables the facility to address diverse storage requirements throughout the year, with particular emphasis on meeting increased demand during peak moving seasons.
