Ron's Amazing Products based in Catonsville, Maryland, which provides consumer gadgets, has recently released a number of videos on YouTube showing why their gadgets are just as helpful for women as they are for men. Ronald Hoff, owner and founder of Ron's Amazing Products, states, "We just want men and women alike to enjoy our products, and on our new videos, you will see women using them just as much as men."

The company, which produces the popular spy camera pen that can be seen at <http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B00G2TEKM2>, says that they want viewers and subscribers to their YouTube channel to realize that their gadgets are designed for both men and women, not one above the other. Ron states that in today's new generation, gender equality is practiced everywhere and that his company aims to be one of those that practice it. "We created all of our products to be enjoyed by people in general, not men or women," he says.

The new videos can be accessed at <http://www.youtube.com/user/RonsAmazingProducts>. The camera pen, the company states, is a great product for both mothers and grandmothers who want to have a camera handy when they take children to the park or on other outings. Ron explains that they realized motherhood can be a very busy time in a woman's life and that often, mothers do not think of grabbing hold of a camera so that they can record life's small moments, particularly those involving their babies and children. They state that the camera pen is a good choice, because it easily fits into purses or diaper bags, and that women should consider carrying it with them for those unexpected situations when they suddenly need a camera. A similar situation exists for grandmothers who naturally would like to record those precious moments with their grandchildren.

The company states that they hope men and women alike will watch and enjoy their YouTube videos and reach out to them through their website with any questions about their products.
