rebuild execution. Serving clients across Chicagoland, the firm?s approach emphasizes clear scopes, coordinated trades, and proactive updates to help stakeholders manage cost, schedule, and quality?especially in time-sensitive situations involving property damage, tenant disruption, or operational downtime.

?Receiving the Global 100 ? 2026 recognition as Best Construction & Restoration Firm of the Year ? USA is a powerful validation of what our team works toward every day?delivering reliable results, especially when clients are navigating urgent, high-stakes situations,? said Morris Gershengorin, Founder and CEO of Real Restoration Group. ?Whether we?re restoring a property after damage or managing a complex construction project, our focus is consistent: clear planning, accountable execution, and a client-first experience built on trust.?

With more than three decades of experience reflected across its operating history, Real Restoration Group has built a reputation for supporting a wide range of project needs, including general contracting, reconstruction, and property restoration for residential and commercial environments. The company?s project teams coordinate multiple disciplines?planning, estimating, and execution?so clients have a single, accountable partner from initial assessment through final completion. This integrated workflow is designed to reduce handoffs, improve timeline predictability, and create a smoother experience for owners and managers who need fast answers and consistent documentation.

In today?s market, many property stakeholders look for providers capable of handling both restoration and construction phases without fragmentation. Real Restoration Group?s service model is built to respond quickly, stabilize conditions, and move projects forward efficiently?whether the goal is returning a home to pre-loss conditions or completing an improvement project that enhances long-term property value. The firm also supports customers who are navigating insurance-related questions tied to property damage by helping organize project documentation and communicating clearly about scope and sequencing.

As part of its ongoing growth and commitment to transparency, Real Restoration Group continues to publish educational resources and updates about services, locations, and project insights through its website?helping customers make informed decisions before, during, and after a project begins. This award recognition reinforces the company?s ongoing focus on workmanship, responsiveness, and professional project delivery across the communities it serves.
