

NurseRegistry Offers Post-Surgical Home Care Services to Meet Growing Palo Alto Demand

February 19, 2026

February 19, 2026 -
NurseRegistry, a leading provider of skilled nursing services in California, has expanded its post-surgical home care services in response to increasing demand from Palo Alto residents seeking professional recovery support outside hospital settings. The expansion addresses a critical gap in post-operative care as more patients transition home sooner following surgical procedures.

The enhanced service offering connects patients recovering from surgery with highly qualified registered nurses and licensed vocational nurses who provide specialized care in the comfort of patients' homes. This development comes as healthcare systems nationwide continue shifting toward home-based recovery models to reduce hospital readmissions and improve patient outcomes.

"Post-surgical recovery requires skilled medical attention that many families are not equipped to provide on their own," said Josh Pangan, CEO of NurseRegistry. "Our expanded services ensure that patients in Palo Alto receive the same level of professional care at home that they would receive in a hospital setting, while maintaining their comfort and privacy during the critical recovery period."

NurseRegistry in Palo Alto offers comprehensive post-operative care services including wound care and dressing changes, infection monitoring and prevention, pain management, vital sign monitoring, and medication administration. The service also encompasses specialized recovery support for cosmetic surgery patients, mobility assistance, and patient education to ensure proper healing and reduce complications.

The matching process connects families with qualified nurses through a streamlined three-step system. Patients or their families contact NurseRegistry to discuss their specific needs, review matched nurse profiles based on required specialties and experience, and then receive care from their selected Palo Alto post surgery nurse. The service operates without upfront payments or obligations, allowing families to find the right match for their needs.

Data from healthcare facilities across California indicate that professional home nursing care significantly reduces post-surgical complications and hospital readmission rates. Patients receiving skilled nursing care at home experience fewer infections, better pain management, and faster overall recovery times compared to those managing recovery without professional support.

The expansion reflects growing recognition of the challenges patients face when transitioning from hospital to home after surgery. Many patients experience anxiety about managing drains, monitoring for complications, and properly caring for surgical sites. Professional nurses address these concerns by providing expert wound care, monitoring for signs of infection or complications, and educating patients and families about the recovery process.
