Court King Injury Law Announces Expanded Legal Representation for Victims of Catastrophic Injury

February 19, 2026

LAS VEGAS, NV - February 19, 2026 -
Court King Injury Law announced the expansion of its catastrophic injury representation, offering dedicated legal services to individuals and families affected by life-altering injuries resulting from serious accidents or negligence. The initiative extends the firm?s capacity to handle high-severity personal injury cases, including those involving permanent disability, traumatic brain injury, spinal damage, and loss of limb. The expansion reflects the firm?s continuing focus on complex litigation where the physical, emotional, and financial consequences extend far beyond initial recovery.

According to the firm, catastrophic injury cases often involve extensive medical treatment, long-term rehabilitation, and lasting changes to quality of life. These claims require a deeper understanding of both medical and legal principles, as they typically involve larger damages and more complicated evidence. Court King Injury Law?s expanded service is designed to guide injured individuals and their families through every phase of the legal process?from evidence collection and medical documentation to settlement negotiations and, when necessary, trial.

The firm noted that catastrophic injuries can result from a range of incidents, including motor vehicle collisions, construction accidents, defective products, and unsafe premises. The expanded service includes representation for victims of truck and rideshare crashes, motorcycle collisions, workplace injuries, and cases of severe falls or structural failures. Each case is examined to determine liability, available coverage, and long-term needs. The firm stated that early involvement often helps preserve evidence and strengthens the factual record, which can be critical in achieving fair compensation.

?Catastrophic injuries change lives in an instant,? said Jordan J. Butler, managing attorney at Court King Injury Law. ?Our focus is on ensuring that those who suffer devastating harm have access to skilled representation that understands both the legal and human dimensions of these cases. Expanding this service allows us to better serve clients whose injuries require sustained legal and medical coordination.?

Court King Injury Law emphasized that catastrophic injury cases differ from standard personal injury claims due to their scope and complexity. Victims often face prolonged recovery, multiple surgeries, or permanent disability. The firm?s approach includes working with medical professionals, economists, and life-care planners to calculate long-term costs associated with treatment, lost income, and necessary accommodations. By aligning legal strategy with medical evidence, the firm seeks to present a complete picture of each client?s damages.

The service also assists families navigating the emotional and financial strain that follows a severe accident. When an injury limits an individual?s ability to work or live independently, the firm helps pursue compensation for both economic losses and non-economic harms such as pain, suffering, and reduced quality of life. In cases where negligence leads to irreversible impairment, the firm works to ensure that settlements or verdicts reflect the lifetime impact of the injury.

According to the firm, many catastrophic injury cases involve multiple liable parties. For instance, a highway collision could include negligent drivers, commercial carriers, or vehicle manufacturers, while a construction injury may involve contractors, property owners, or equipment suppliers. Court King Injury Law?s expanded service includes comprehensive investigation and coordination among experts to identify every responsible entity. The firm stated that this approach helps ensure that victims can pursue the full measure of damages available under the law.

?Cases of this magnitude require diligence, patience, and an understanding of what recovery truly means,? Jordan Butler said. ?It?s not just about a single payout?it?s about building stability for someone whose life has been permanently altered. That?s what guides our work in catastrophic injury representation.?

The firm?s catastrophic injury expansion also integrates with its existing focus on traumatic brain injury, spinal cord damage, and wrongful death claims. These cases often require specialized knowledge of medical terminology, imaging, and long-term prognosis. Court King Injury Law confirmed that its attorneys and support staff are trained to handle the detailed documentation and communication necessary to manage such cases effectively.

The firm explained that catastrophic injury representation typically begins with an in-depth consultation to review the facts of the case, medical records, and available insurance coverage. From there, the firm conducts a full investigation, which may include site inspections, expert evaluations, and reconstruction of the event. Settlement discussions are approached only after the complete extent of the injuries is understood, ensuring that clients do not accept premature offers that fail to address future care needs.

Court King Injury Law reiterated that its goal is to ensure fair outcomes grounded in verified evidence. The firm approaches each catastrophic injury claim with the same standards of documentation and advocacy used in trial preparation, even if the case resolves through negotiation. This method, the firm noted, helps strengthen its position during settlement discussions and reinforces accountability among defendants and insurers.

Catastrophic injury claims often take longer to resolve due to the complexity of damages and the number of involved parties. The firm encourages clients to maintain thorough medical and financial records and to seek prompt legal guidance after any severe incident. Jordan J. Butler explained that early legal involvement can help preserve vital records and prevent procedural delays that might limit a client?s ability to recover compensation.

The expansion also underscores Court King Injury Law?s broader mission to provide structured, ethical representation for individuals harmed by negligence throughout Nevada. The firm?s work in personal injury litigation spans car and truck accidents, construction site injuries, workplace claims, premises liability, and wrongful death. The addition of expanded catastrophic injury services continues that mission, focusing on the needs of victims whose lives have been most profoundly disrupted.

?Each catastrophic injury case represents both a legal challenge and a human story,? Jordan Butler said. ?Our responsibility is to build the strongest possible foundation for our clients? futures?one supported by truth, preparation, and compassion.?
