March 04, 2026

STATEN ISLAND, NY - March 04, 2026 -
Buy Tical has introduced the Bump TICAL Retro Pager Bluetooth Speaker, a travel-sized audio device that combines nostalgic design elements with modern wireless technology. The product represents the latest addition to the TICAL brand portfolio, which takes its name from the acronym Taking Into Consideration All Lives.

The Method Man bluetooth speaker features a distinctive retro pager aesthetic complete with a heavy-duty clip for belt or bag attachment. The device incorporates Bluetooth 5.0 technology with a 30-foot range, True Wireless Stereo Pairing capabilities, and delivers more than seven hours of playback on a single charge. Additional features include a built-in LED flashlight, hands-free calling functionality with high-sensitivity microphone, USB charging capability, and MP3 player support through TF card compatibility. The speaker carries an IPX6 water-resistance rating for durability in various conditions.

"The retro pager design speaks to a generation that remembers when communication devices were simple yet essential accessories," said Joshua "Raz" Rassin, TICAL co-founder and COO. "This speaker bridges that nostalgic connection with contemporary audio technology, creating something that resonates both culturally and functionally with our customer base."

The product launch aligns with growing consumer interest in nostalgia-driven technology products that blend vintage aesthetics with modern functionality. Market analysis indicates increased demand for retro-inspired electronic devices, particularly among consumers who value both design heritage and technological innovation. The speaker joins TICAL's expanding merchandise catalog, which includes limited production clothing, accessories, and lifestyle products distributed through the BuyTical online platform.

Priced at $79.00 USD, the speaker is available for purchase through the BuyTical website. Due to current demand levels, the company has indicated that order processing and shipping may require two to three weeks for fulfillment. Customers receive email notifications regarding their order status throughout the fulfillment process. The extended fulfillment timeline reflects the brand's limited production approach, which has become a defining characteristic of TICAL's distribution model.

The release follows TICAL's established pattern of introducing products that merge cultural significance with practical application. The brand's merchandise strategy focuses on limited production runs, creating an element of exclusivity across their product lines including apparel, accessories, and now audio equipment. This approach has positioned TICAL within the premium lifestyle brand segment, where controlled availability drives consumer interest.

TICAL operates as a premium clothing and accessories brand offering curated merchandise through its BuyTical e-commerce platform. The company's product portfolio encompasses apparel collections, accessories, and lifestyle products, with distribution handled exclusively through their online retail channel. TICAL maintains an active presence across social media platforms and operates a subscription service for customers seeking regular updates about product releases and brand developments.
