Auxilion Appoints Eleanor Dempsey as Director of Advisory Services

February 26, 2026

Dublin, IE - February 26, 2026 -
Auxilion, a digital services provider serving clients across Ireland and the United Kingdom, has announced the appointment of Eleanor Dempsey to the position of Director of Advisory Services. The appointment took effect this month as the company expands its strategic advisory capabilities.

In her new role, Dempsey will oversee the Advisory Services practice, which focuses on helping organizations accelerate digital transformation initiatives and strengthen operational resilience. She will be responsible for developing the practice's strategic direction and managing client engagements across multiple industry sectors.

The appointment builds on Dempsey's extensive experience within Auxilion, where she has held several senior positions over the course of her career. She previously served as Chief Operating Officer, Director of Business Transformation, and Principal Consultant. Her background includes expertise in strategic planning, operational performance improvement, and large-scale transformation projects.

Dempsey will continue to serve concurrently as Director of Strategy, Innovation and Transformation at Auxilion, a position in which she oversees company-wide strategic initiatives and growth planning. The dual role structure reflects the company's approach to integrating advisory services with its broader strategic objectives.

Patrick Jordan, Chief Executive Officer of Auxilion, commented on the appointment in a statement released by the company. "Eleanor's deep understanding of our business and her proven ability to deliver meaningful outcomes for customers make her exceptionally well suited to lead our Advisory Services function," Jordan said. "This appointment reflects both her strategic leadership and her ability to connect long-term vision with execution excellence."

Jordan added that the appointment supports Auxilion's plans to expand its presence in Ireland and the United Kingdom. The company serves clients in both public and private sectors, providing technology advisory services and digital transformation support.

In remarks about her appointment, Dempsey noted the increasing complexity facing organizations today. "Organisations are facing challenges ranging from increased regulation to heightened competition," Dempsey said. "The value of digital services has never been greater. Our Advisory Services division focuses on driving measurable impact for clients, supporting their digital journeys and enhancing business operations."

Dempsey stated that the division emphasizes reliability and compliance in its client engagements. She expressed commitment to strengthening Auxilion's position as an advisory partner across both public and private sector organizations.

Dempsey holds academic qualifications in business and technology fields. She earned a bachelor's degree in business studies from the University of Glamorgan, a master's degree in project management from the University of Limerick, and a postgraduate diploma in information systems from Ulster University.

The Advisory Services practice at Auxilion provides consulting support for digital transformation, technology strategy, and operational improvement initiatives. The practice works with clients to develop and implement technology solutions aligned with business objectives.

Auxilion operates as a digital services provider with operations in Ireland and the United Kingdom. The company delivers technology consulting, managed services, and digital transformation support to organizations across various industry sectors.
