Christian Fischbacher Bed & Bath AG announced today the expansion of its digital information platforms to provide industry professionals and consumers with enhanced access to textile manufacturing insights and product specifications across its bedding and bath collections.

The St. Gallen-based textile manufacturer, a subsidiary of FREMAUX DELORME, has updated its online resources to include detailed product specifications, manufacturing processes, and material sourcing information. The expansion addresses growing demand for transparency in textile production and material composition.

The company has published detailed specifications for each material type, including fill power ratings, origin certifications, and care instructions.

The bath products division encompasses terry cloth items, bath rugs, bathrobes, and kimonos. Manufacturing specifications now available online include thread counts, absorption rates, and textile weight measurements for each product category.

The company's digital expansion includes updates to its main website and magazine platform, which now feature technical articles on textile manufacturing processes and material innovations. These resources provide industry-specific content including weaving techniques, dyeing processes, and fiber technology developments.
