April 13, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Aromahead Institute has announced that they are offering a free live webinar on how to become a certified aromatherapist. The webinar will help those interested in learning how to become an expert in aromatherapy, and confidently make effective and safe blends for a wide range of health issues. Thousands of people have already registered for the webinar, and it is set to be a great success.

Andrea Butje from Aromahead Institute says: "I live and breathe aromatherapy and love nothing more but to share my knowledge. This is why my institute also offers a full aromatherapy certification program, something that I will talk about in the webinar. I really want to encourage everyone to join me in this incredible opportunity."

During the free webinar, Butje will discuss the 235-hour ACP (Aromatherapy Certification Program) that is offered through the Aromahead Institute. This program will enable students to become Certified Aromatherapists. The webinar will teach a simple method for understanding essential oil chemistry, and go over all the requirements to get certified. Plus, some excellent Aromatherapy prizes are being given away on the live webinar, so be sure to reserve a spot. The institute's website is where those interested can contact them for more information regarding the free webinar.

Butje is committed to offering people an online learning environment that can benefit them at every stage of their education. This is also why she has launched the webinar, which will demonstrate some of the online learning environments that people can enjoy if they sign up for the course itself. "During the course, students can enjoy dozens of blending activities, exclusive videos, case study assignments, and more," adds Andrea Butje. "Furthermore, I focus strongly on creating a community so students can interact with each other, something they can get started with as soon as they begin the program."

The Alliance of International Aromatherapists (AIA) and the National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy (NAHA) have both fully accredited the ACP program offered by the Aromatherapy Institute. These two bodies are America's most recognized organizations for aromatherapy certification and education. On completing the course, students can take the ARC (Aromatherapy Registration Council) exam.

People are encouraged to learn more about the webinar and the ACP program through the Aromatherapy Institute's website.
