

Revive Skincare Clinic Introduces Hyla3D Face Cream to Meet Growing Demand for Advanced Anti-Aging Solutions

March 24, 2026

WINTER PARK, FL - March 24, 2026 -
Revive Skincare Clinic in Winter Park, Florida, has introduced Hyla3D Face Cream to its treatment portfolio as the medical spa responds to increasing client demand for advanced anti-aging skincare solutions. The addition of this hyaluronic acid-based treatment represents the clinic's commitment to offering scientifically-backed skincare options that address multiple signs of aging.

The Hyla3D Face Cream utilizes a triple-action hyaluronic acid complex designed to hydrate, plump, and smooth the skin at multiple levels. This formulation addresses common aging concerns including fine lines, wrinkles, and loss of skin elasticity, that many clients seek to improve through professional skincare treatments.

"The introduction of Hyla3D Face Cream aligns with our mission to provide clients with clinically proven skincare solutions that deliver visible results," said Dr. Gregory Boger, Medical Director at Revive Skincare

Clinic. "We've seen remarkable interest from clients seeking alternatives to more invasive procedures, and this advanced formulation offers them a non-invasive option that still provides significant anti-aging benefits."

The timing of this addition comes as the skincare industry reports continued growth in demand for professional-grade anti-aging treatments. Recent industry data indicates that consumers increasingly seek products that combine scientific innovation with proven results, particularly those recommended and administered by medical professionals.

Revive Skincare Clinic has observed this trend firsthand, with client consultations frequently focusing on preventative aging treatments and maintenance protocols. The Hyla3D Face Cream serves clients ranging from those beginning their anti-aging journey to those seeking to enhance their existing skincare routines.

The product's formulation incorporates three different molecular weights of hyaluronic acid, allowing for penetration at various skin depths. This multi-level approach helps address surface hydration while also working to improve skin structure and elasticity from within. The cream also includes peptides and antioxidants that support the skin's natural renewal processes.

"Our clients appreciate having access to medical-grade skincare that they can incorporate into their daily routines between clinical treatments," noted Dr. Boger. "The Hyla3D Face Cream complements our other services and helps clients maintain their results longer."

The introduction of this treatment option reflects broader changes in the medical aesthetics field, where combination approaches using both in-office procedures and at-home medical-grade products have become standard practice for optimal results.

Revive Skincare Clinic operates as a medical spa in Florida, specializing in non-invasive aesthetic treatments and professional skincare services. The clinic combines medical expertise with advanced skincare technology to provide personalized treatment plans for clients seeking to address various skin concerns. Under medical supervision, the clinic offers a range of services including facial treatments, injectable services, and medical-grade skincare products, serving the Winter Park community and surrounding areas with evidence-based aesthetic solutions.
