The Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC announces expanded legal support for Atlanta metro area victims of distracted driving crashes, responding to concerning findings from Georgia's 2024 distracted driving report. The joint study by the Georgia Governor's Office of Highway Safety and Emory University's Injury Prevention Research Center revealed that distracted driving contributes to 55 percent of all motor vehicle crashes statewide, with Atlanta drivers showing distraction rates 38 percent higher than the rest of Georgia.

The Cumming-based personal injury firm, which serves clients throughout the Atlanta metropolitan area, emphasizes the critical importance of rapid evidence preservation in distracted driving cases. As a Humberto Law Atlanta personal injury lawyer team with extensive experience in motor vehicle accident litigation, the firm recognizes that cell phone records, app usage data, and vehicle black box information have limited retention windows that can impact case outcomes under Georgia's fault-based liability system.

"The GOHS and Emory findings confirm what we observe daily in our Atlanta personal injury practice - distracted driving has become the dominant factor in metro area crashes, creating unprecedented risks for all road users," stated Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., Founder and Personal Injury Attorney at the Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC. "Our combination of insurance defense experience and bilingual capability allows us to aggressively pursue distracted driving claims while ensuring Atlanta's diverse injury victim population has direct access to experienced legal representation without language barriers."

The 2024 report's data reveals particularly troubling statistics for the Atlanta area. Emory University researchers found that approximately 18 percent of Atlanta-area drivers operate while distracted, compared to 13 percent for the rest of Georgia. In 2023 alone, distracted driving contributed to 12,779 crashes in Atlanta, representing approximately 39.4 percent of the city's total 32,000 crashes that year according to the Georgia Department of Transportation Crash Data Portal.

These statistics gain additional significance in light of Georgia Senate Bill 68, signed in April 2025, which introduced new restrictions on how noneconomic damages may be argued before juries and modified seat belt admissibility rules affecting comparative fault assessments in Atlanta car accident cases. The firm's three-attorney team, including Armando D. Izquierdo and Grant Tall alongside founder Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., brings multi-attorney depth to complex personal injury cases across the full spectrum of practice areas.

The firm's bilingual English and Spanish capability serves Atlanta's large Latino community, eliminating the need for outside interpreters and providing direct attorney-client communication throughout the legal process. This language accessibility proves particularly valuable as Atlanta personal injury lawyer services become increasingly essential for victims navigating the complexities of distracted driving claims and insurance negotiations.

The Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC operates on a contingency fee basis, offering free consultations to injury victims throughout the Atlanta metro area. The firm handles personal injury, workers' compensation, car accidents, truck accidents, and catastrophic injury cases. Founded by Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., a former insurance defense litigator and Super Lawyers selectee from 2017 through 2025, the firm maintains offices in Cumming while serving clients across the greater Georgia metropolitan region.
