A.J. Klein Jewelers Schedules Ear Piercing Clinic for March 28

March 30, 2026

SHELTON, CT - March 30, 2026 -
A.J. Klein Jewelers has scheduled an ear piercing clinic for Saturday, March 28, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The event offers professional ear piercing services conducted by a registered nurse in a controlled setting. Appointments are required and can be arranged by calling or texting the store.

As a jewelry store in Shelton, CT, A.J. Klein Jewelers has provided such services as part of its community-oriented operations since 1992. The clinic represents one element of the family's approach to extending its expertise beyond standard jewelry transactions. Participants receive guidance on aftercare to support proper healing following the procedure.

The business maintains a selection of fine jewelry through partnerships with established designers. These include options for various occasions, with staff available to discuss features of different pieces. Loose diamonds are offered for custom settings, allowing clients to create individualized items based on preferences.

Custom design work involves consultations where customers outline desired modifications. This may include resetting stones from existing jewelry into updated configurations or combining elements from multiple pieces. The process emphasizes alignment with client specifications while utilizing standard jewelry-making techniques.

Repair services address common needs such as ring resizing, polishing of metal surfaces, and restoration of broken chains or clasps. Watch repairs encompass battery replacements and strap adjustments. Appraisals provide documented evaluations of jewelry items for purposes including insurance documentation.

One customer described the process of selecting a custom piece as involving clear explanations of available options and materials. Such accounts illustrate the store's method of handling individual requests during routine operations.

The company also offers ear piercing as an ongoing service outside of clinics, with the March 28 event structured to accommodate multiple participants efficiently. The two-hour window allows for focused attention on each appointment.

Throughout its 33 years of operation, A.J. Klein Jewelers has built its reputation on consistent handling of jewelry from initial purchase through long-term maintenance. Staff members assist with selections for milestones, including engagement rings and wedding bands, drawing on knowledge of diamond characteristics like cut and clarity. Materials such as white gold and platinum are available for these items.

Heirloom modifications form another component of the offerings. Clients present family pieces for updates that incorporate modern elements while retaining sentimental components. This service requires detailed planning to ensure the final result meets expectations.

The store's facility supports on-site completion of many repair tasks, minimizing turnaround times. Appraisals follow established industry protocols to determine values accurately.

Holiday periods often coincide with increased activity in jewelry-related decisions. The upcoming clinic aligns with spring timing, when families may consider introductory jewelry experiences for younger members.

"Ear piercing clinics allow us to apply professional standards in a familiar environment," said Alan Klein, owner of A.J. Klein Jewelers. "Scheduling these sessions supports community needs with qualified oversight."

Operations at the store include periodic updates to inventory based on designer collections. Styles range from classic designs to those with contemporary influences, providing a range of choices without emphasis on any particular trend.

Custom work sometimes merges components from separate items into a single cohesive design. This accommodates requests that blend heritage with personal style preferences.

Repairs to chains and other fittings use conventional methods to restore functionality. The business handles these as part of its comprehensive service model.

The March 28 clinic requires advance booking to manage the schedule effectively. This setup ensures each session proceeds without delays.

"This event continues our practice of offering accessible services that complement core jewelry activities," continued Klein. "It reflects the ongoing role the store plays in local routines."

A.J. Klein Jewelers operates as a family-owned business in Shelton, CT, specializing in fine jewelry, diamonds, custom designs, and repairs. Since 1992, the company has collaborated with designers to maintain selections suited to different requirements.
