

Clodius & Co. Jewelers Provides Gold Buy-Back Program as Prices Remain Elevated

March 30, 2026

ROCKFORD, IL - March 30, 2026 -
Clodius & Co continues to operate its gold buy-back program amid sustained high gold prices in March 2026. Spot prices have traded near $4,500 per ounce recently, with values reaching as high as $4,560 in late March according to market reports. This environment has prompted increased interest in converting unwanted precious metals into cash through local services.

The program accepts gold, silver, platinum, diamonds, and precious gemstones. Customers bring items to the store for evaluation based on current market conditions, purity, and weight. Trained staff conduct the assessments with an emphasis on honesty and transparency, followed by immediate cash payment upon agreement.

As a jewelry store in Rockford, IL, the company has offered this service consistently for 25 years. It provides a practical option for individuals reviewing personal holdings during periods of elevated precious metal values. The process is designed to be straightforward, allowing completion in a single visit when possible.

J.P. Morgan Global Research has projected gold prices could approach $5,000 per ounce by the fourth quarter of 2026, citing ongoing central bank demand and investor diversification trends. Such forecasts underscore the relevance of established buy-back options in the current market.

The evaluation at Clodius & Co. aligns with prevailing rates while maintaining fair practices. This consistency has supported its role as a community resource through various price cycles. Additionally, they provide expert consultations to educate clients about market trends, ensuring that consumers make informed decisions regarding their jewelry investments.

Mark Clodius, Founder of Clodius & Co., commented on the service. "The gold buy-back program offers a reliable way for people to assess the value of items they no longer need," said Clodius.

The program integrates with the company's broader focus on jewelry services, including custom jewelry design. Customers exploring sales sometimes consider new personalized pieces, creating a natural connection between offerings.

Monika Clodius, Co-Founder of Clodius & Co., added context on operations. "Honest evaluations remain central to how the program functions," said Clodius.

Clodius & Co. also maintains a commitment to community involvement, including support for Ukraine relief initiatives. A virtual tour of the store is available for those interested in the setting where assessments take place. The company distributes a newsletter with periodic updates on services and general market observations, ensuring clients stay informed about industry trends.

Staff members bring extensive collective experience to each transaction. This expertise contributes to informed and consistent handling across the gold buy-back program and related activities, enhancing the customer experience. In the present economic setting, with gold showing resilience despite short-term fluctuations, the program serves as a local avenue for asset review. Transactions proceed efficiently, reflecting the company's long-standing approach to customer interactions.

Clodius & Co. emphasizes personal service and integrity in all aspects of its work. The gold buy-back program forms one element of this commitment, available alongside options for custom designs and other jewelry selections, catering to a wide variety of tastes and preferences. Whether seeking investment opportunities or unique pieces, Clodius & Co. remains dedicated to exceeding customer expectations.
