

Leo's Vacation Center Highlights Why Class B Motorhomes Have Become So Popular

March 31, 2026

GAMBRILLS, MD - March 31, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Leo's Vacation Center has noted sustained customer interest in Class B motorhomes amid broader shifts in recreational vehicle preferences. The dealership in Gambrills observes that these compact vehicles continue to draw attention from travelers who value practical features for road trips and outdoor activities. Class B motorhomes, built on van chassis and commonly referred to as camper vans, typically range from 16 to 22 feet in length and support two to four occupants.

Maneuverability stands out as a primary reason for their appeal. The smaller footprint enables drivers to handle city streets, narrow campground roads, and scenic byways more readily than larger motorhomes. Parking and turning require less adjustment, allowing operators to concentrate on the travel experience itself.

Interior layouts contribute to the interest through efficient use of space. Designs incorporate sleeping quarters, kitchen areas for basic meal preparation, bathrooms, and seating that converts as needed. Storage compartments maximize available room while keeping essentials organized. Features such as solar panel compatibility and communication boosters appear in select models to extend usability during longer outings.

Fuel efficiency provides another measurable advantage. Industry observations indicate that Class B motorhomes often achieve between 14 and 22 miles per gallon, depending on the model, driving conditions, and engine type. This range exceeds typical figures for Class A motorhomes, which commonly fall between 6 and 10 miles per gallon, and many Class C units that average 8 to 13 miles per gallon. The lighter weight and aerodynamic profile support reduced consumption over extended distances.

Access to varied destinations further explains the trend. The compact size opens options for national parks, remote campsites, and locations where oversized vehicles face restrictions. Travelers gain flexibility to adjust plans spontaneously without the constraints imposed by larger dimensions.

The vehicles align well with solo travelers and couples. Layouts create functional yet intimate environments suitable for short excursions or multi-week journeys. Setup and operation remain straightforward, supporting independent use at any stop.

Sales manager Bill Foster went on to say "Class B motorhomes, or camper vans, have surged in popularity due to their exceptional versatility, ease of driving, and maneuverability compared to larger RVs."

Market analyses provide context for the observed interest. Reports indicate the global Class B motorhome sector expanded from approximately 14.34 billion dollars in 2024 toward projected values exceeding 25 billion dollars by 2033, reflecting a compound annual growth rate near 6.7 percent in recent forecasts. Earlier shipment data from the RV Industry Association showed strong gains in the van camper category during peak periods, with Class B units demonstrating resilience even as overall motorized RV shipments fluctuated in 2025 and early 2026.

Leo's Vacation Center carries new and pre-owned Class B motorhomes from established manufacturers, including Entegra Coach, Thor Motor Coach, and Coachmen RV. Available floor plans vary to accommodate different group sizes and travel patterns. The sales team assists customers by reviewing specifications and demonstrating how features correspond to common usage scenarios.

The dealership maintains full service capabilities for all recreational vehicle types in its inventory. Staff members address questions on maintenance, operation, and component integration based on hands-on experience with the product lines.

Leo's Vacation Center operates as a family-owned business with more than 50 years in the recreational vehicle sector. The company provides sales and service for travel trailers, fifth wheels, toy haulers, and motorhomes of multiple classes. Its indoor showroom in Gambrills serves customers from the region between Baltimore and Washington D.C.

Leo's Vacation Center continues to track developments in customer preferences across the recreational vehicle market. The attention directed toward Class B motorhomes reflects ongoing adjustments in how individuals and families approach travel and outdoor recreation.
