April 08, 2026

ZIONSVILLE, IN - April 08, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bone Dry Roofing has established a new location serving the Zionsville area, marking a recent development in the company's operations within central Indiana. The addition of this location reflects a continued presence in the region and introduces a dedicated base for roofing & exterior services tied to the Zionsville community.

The company, known as Bone Dry Roofing, operates across multiple service areas and has identified Zionsville as a location for a new operational site. The decision to open a location in this area follows ongoing activity in surrounding communities and aligns with the company's existing footprint in Indiana.

According to Marcy Petricig Braasch, the company's spokesperson, the new location represents a step connected to the organization's structure and how it manages service areas. "Establishing a location associated with Zionsville allows for a clearer alignment between our operations and the communities we serve," said Braasch. "It provides a defined presence in an area where we have continued to carry out roofing and exterior-related work."

The Zionsville area has experienced steady residential development over time, contributing to a consistent need for maintenance and exterior-related services. The introduction of a location associated with Roofing & Exterior Services situates the company within this local context, where property upkeep and weather-related considerations often shape service demand.

Bone Dry Roofing's work encompasses roofing systems and exterior components, which are influenced by seasonal weather patterns common in Indiana. The company's presence in Zionsville places it within a geographic area where such conditions can affect both residential and commercial structures throughout the year.

Braasch noted that the establishment of the location is tied to how the company organizes its service coverage. "Having a designated location connected to Zionsville supports the way we coordinate work across different parts of the region," Braasch said. "It reflects how we structure our operations in response to the areas we serve."

The Zionsville service area is referenced as part of the company's broader network, which includes multiple communities throughout the state. By associating a location with Zionsville, the company formalizes its connection to the area within its existing framework.

Local communities such as Zionsville often experience a range of exterior maintenance needs influenced by environmental exposure over time. Roofing systems, siding, and other exterior elements require periodic attention as part of standard property upkeep. The presence of a service provider in the area contributes to the overall landscape of available resources for property owners.

The company's website provides information about its service areas, including details related to Zionsville. This information outlines how the location fits into the company's wider operations and geographic coverage.

The announcement of the Zionsville location comes as part of the company's ongoing activity within Indiana. While the company continues to operate in multiple areas, the addition of a location tied specifically to Zionsville distinguishes this development as a localized update.

Braasch stated that the company views location-specific operations as a way to maintain alignment with different communities. "Each area has its own characteristics, and establishing a presence tied to a specific location reflects that," Braasch said. "Zionsville is now part of that structure in a more defined way."

Bone Dry Roofing continues its work across its service areas, with the Zionsville location now included as part of its operational framework in Indiana, as officially announced.
