The Sharma Law Firm Announces Expansion Into Pedestrian Accident Cases

April 07, 2026

DOVER, DE - April 07, 2026 -
The Sharma Law Firm announced the expansion of its legal service line to include representation for pedestrian accident cases, a development introduced in 2026 at its Dover office to address an increase in incidents involving pedestrians and motor vehicles. The expansion reflects growing legal demand linked to contributing factors such as distracted driving, impaired walking, and roadway safety concerns. ?This service line was developed in response to patterns observed in pedestrian-related incidents and aims to provide structured legal support for individuals involved in these cases,? said Aman Sharma, attorney at the firm.

The Sharma Law Firm operates from its office at 1326 S Governors Ave #101 and provides legal services related to personal injury matters. The firm has incorporated pedestrian accident representation into its existing practice areas, which include motor vehicle collision cases and liability-related claims. This addition aligns with broader trends indicating increased attention to pedestrian safety and legal accountability in traffic-related incidents.

Pedestrian accidents in Delaware have been associated with multiple contributing conditions documented in traffic and safety analyses. Distracted driving remains a significant factor, with mobile device usage and in-vehicle distractions diverting driver attention from road conditions. These behaviors can reduce reaction time and awareness, increasing the likelihood of collisions involving individuals on foot.

Impaired walking also contributes to pedestrian vulnerability in traffic environments. Alcohol or substance use may affect coordination and decision-making, which can alter how individuals navigate roadways or intersections. These conditions may intersect with driver-related risks, creating complex circumstances in accident investigations and subsequent legal claims.

Reckless behavior on roadways continues to be identified as another factor influencing pedestrian accident rates. Actions such as speeding, failure to yield, and disregard for traffic controls may increase the severity and frequency of incidents. Legal cases involving these elements often require examination of traffic records, witness statements, and roadway conditions to determine liability.

Impatience among both drivers and pedestrians has also been cited in analyses of roadway incidents. Rapid decision-making at intersections, unsafe crossing attempts, and aggressive driving maneuvers may contribute to unsafe conditions. These patterns highlight the importance of examining behavioral factors alongside physical evidence when evaluating pedestrian accident cases.

The Sharma Law Firm structures its pedestrian accident representation to address these multifaceted elements within applicable legal frameworks. Case evaluations may include review of police reports, medical documentation, and environmental factors present at the time of the incident. Legal processes are guided by state regulations governing negligence, liability, and damages associated with personal injury claims.

Founded to provide legal services in personal injury law, the firm continues to expand its practice areas in response to emerging case trends. The integration of pedestrian accident representation reflects an operational adjustment based on observed needs within the legal landscape. The firm maintains a focus on case documentation, procedural compliance, and adherence to court requirements.

The Sharma Law Firm also maintains informational resources related to personal injury law and case procedures. These materials outline general legal processes, including filing timelines, documentation requirements, and potential outcomes of civil claims. Pedestrian accident claims may involve multiple parties, including drivers, municipalities, or other entities responsible for roadway conditions. Legal evaluation often considers whether traffic laws were followed and whether environmental factors contributed to the incident. Documentation such as surveillance footage, accident reconstruction analysis, and medical assessments may form part of the case record.

The firm?s expansion into this area is positioned within a broader context of roadway safety discussions and legal accountability. Policymakers and safety organizations continue to assess infrastructure design, enforcement measures, and public awareness campaigns aimed at reducing pedestrian-related incidents. Legal representation functions within this environment by addressing claims arising from documented events.
