

Voytec Decorator Ltd Highlights Client Feedback Following Growth in Specialist Interior Projects

April 06, 2026

Bradford, England - April 06, 2026 -
Voytec Decorator Ltd has announced a recent milestone reflecting sustained growth and consistent delivery across specialist interior projects, marked by a strong body of independently submitted client reviews. The company, based in Shipley and operating throughout West Yorkshire, confirmed that recent feedback highlights ongoing demand for microcement, Venetian plaster, and professional decorating services across residential and commercial settings.

The announcement follows a period of increased project activity during which Voytec Decorator Ltd completed a wide range of bespoke interior finishes, including microcement kitchens and floors, decorative plaster feature walls, and full painting and wallpapering schemes. The volume and consistency of recent reviews have prompted the business to formally acknowledge the role client feedback plays in shaping its operations and standards.

Voytec Decorator Ltd was founded in 2008 and is led by owner Wojciech Wasilewski. The company operates as a specialist decorative contractor, delivering finishes that require technical skill and precise application. Its services are carried out by trained installers rather than general tradespeople, particularly in the case of microcement and Venetian plaster, which are treated as specialist surface systems rather than standard decorating work.

Recent reviews highlight both the quality of finished surfaces and the collaborative process during projects. One client, Akash Kurmi, commented on a completed kitchen installation involving a microcement splashback. The review described the finished surface as visually refined and practical for everyday use, while also noting that the installation process was handled with care and efficiency. Feedback also highlighted clear communication throughout the project and satisfaction with the overall outcome once the work was complete.

Another review, submitted by Liam Augur, focused on a microcement flooring project where colour selection and finish were key considerations. The feedback emphasised the importance of collaboration during the planning stage and referenced the installer?s role in achieving a specific aesthetic requirement. According to the review, the final floor finish aligned with the intended design and met expectations in terms of appearance and performance.

Additional feedback has also referenced painting and decorating work completed under the Voytec Decorator Ltd name. Dr Christopher Butler commented on a project delivered under the Wortek brand, noting attention to detail and finish quality across painted surfaces. The review described the outcome as precise and well executed, and recommended the business based on the overall standard of workmanship and reliability demonstrated during the project.

According to Voytec Decorator Ltd, the range of feedback reflects the variety of work undertaken by the company, from specialist surface finishes to more traditional interior decorating. While the services differ in technique and materials, the company maintains that consistent preparation, methodical application, and clear client communication underpin every project regardless of scale.

Wojciech Wasilewski stated that client reviews are viewed internally as a measure of accountability rather than promotion. ?Each review represents a completed project and a client who trusted the process from start to finish,? said Wasilewski. ?The feedback reflects the importance of preparation, technical understanding, and working closely with clients to achieve the intended result. Maintaining that standard across every project remains a priority.?

The company operates across Bradford, Leeds, Harrogate, Halifax, Ilkley, and surrounding West Yorkshire towns, including Bingley, Keighley, Skipton, Wakefield, Pontefract, Huddersfield, York, Doncaster, Otley, Haworth, Burley-in-Wharfedale, Menston, Guiseley, Yeadon, Greengates, Apperley Bridge, and Horsforth, undertaking both private and developer-led work. Projects range from single-room refurbishments to full interior schemes, often combining multiple finishes within the same property. Microcement installations are commonly used for kitchens, bathrooms, and floors, while Venetian plaster is typically specified for feature walls, stairwells, and reception spaces.

Voytec Decorator Ltd notes that many reviews reference not only the visual outcome of a project but also factors such as cleanliness on site, adherence to agreed timelines, and clarity around materials and processes. These operational aspects are considered essential when working within occupied homes or live commercial environments.

The business has attributed its recent growth in reviews to increased referrals and repeat clients, particularly among homeowners who commission additional work after an initial project. According to internal records, a significant proportion of new enquiries originate from recommendations, indicating that completed work continues to generate further demand without reliance on short-term promotions.

As part of its ongoing operations, Voytec Decorator Ltd continues to invest in professional training and certified materials for specialist finishes. Microcement and Venetian plaster applications are carried out using system-based products and defined installation processes, which the company states are essential for durability and long-term performance.

The company confirmed that it will continue to monitor and respond to client feedback as part of its quality control process. Reviews are assessed alongside internal project evaluations to identify areas for improvement and to ensure that installation standards remain consistent across all service areas.
