

Longmont Braces Highlights Comprehensive Orthodontic Options Including Traditional and Clear Braces

April 09, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - April 09, 2026 -
Longmont Braces continues to provide comprehensive orthodontic treatment options for patients of all ages, offering both traditional metal braces and clear ceramic alternatives to meet diverse patient needs and preferences throughout the Longmont and Firestone communities.

The orthodontic practice, led by Dr. Stephanie Ross and Dr. Aden Peterson, emphasizes the importance of personalized treatment planning in determining the most appropriate orthodontic solution for each patient. The practice's approach involves evaluating individual cases to recommend either traditional metal braces or clear ceramic braces based on specific treatment requirements, lifestyle considerations, and aesthetic preferences.

Traditional metal braces remain a highly effective orthodontic treatment option, utilizing constant, gentle pressure to guide teeth into proper alignment. These braces consist of metal brackets bonded to teeth and connected by wires that orthodontists adjust during regular appointments. Metal braces effectively treat a wide range of orthodontic issues, from simple spacing problems to complex bite corrections.

Clear ceramic braces offer an alternative for patients seeking a more discreet orthodontic solution. These braces function similarly to traditional metal braces but feature tooth-colored or clear brackets that blend with natural tooth color. While providing the same treatment effectiveness as metal braces, ceramic options appeal to teens and adults who prefer a less noticeable appearance during treatment.

"Every patient presents unique orthodontic needs, and our role involves carefully evaluating these individual factors to recommend the most suitable treatment approach," said Dr. Stephanie Ross, orthodontist at Longmont Braces. "Whether a patient chooses traditional metal braces or clear ceramic options, we develop customized treatment plans that address their specific orthodontic concerns while considering their lifestyle and personal preferences."

The selection between traditional and clear braces at Longmont Braces depends on several factors. Treatment complexity plays a significant role, as certain orthodontic cases may respond better to specific brace types. Patient age and lifestyle considerations also influence the decision, with adults often preferring the aesthetic advantages of clear braces for professional settings. Additionally, oral hygiene habits and commitment to care requirements factor into the recommendation process.

The practice utilizes advanced technology, including 3D imaging and digital scanning, to create precise treatment plans regardless of the brace type selected. This technology enables the orthodontic team to map out detailed treatment strategies and provide patients with accurate timelines for their orthodontic journey.

Beyond traditional and clear braces, the practice offers additional orthodontic services including Invisalign clear aligners, two-phase treatment for younger patients, surgical orthodontics for severe cases, and temporary anchorage devices for specialized tooth movement. This comprehensive range of services ensures patients receive appropriate care for their specific orthodontic needs.

Longmont Braces serves patients across all age groups, from children receiving early intervention to adults seeking orthodontic treatment later in life. The practice maintains two locations in Longmont and Firestone, Colorado, providing accessible orthodontic care to the surrounding communities. Dr. Ross, a Longmont native and Niwot High School alumna, brings specialized training in both traditional braces and clear aligner therapy to the practice.
