FORT LAUDERDALE, FL - April 10, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Josef & Joseph provides clients with access to in-house craftsmanship for fine jewelry, watches, and clocks through its father-son team of master craftsmen. All work is completed under one roof to maintain direct control over quality and processes in every project.

The business is led by Josef Hirzinger, an European Master Watch and Clock Maker, Master Jeweler, and Carpenter trained in Austria, Switzerland, and Germany. He brings more than 30 years of experience in watch repair and restoration. His son, Joseph Gabriel Hirzinger, works alongside him with comparable training from the same European centers. The collaboration combines established expertise with shared dedication to precision in all aspects of the trade.

"The training in European centers provided a strong foundation in traditional techniques that we apply to modern pieces," said Josef Hirzinger, owner. "This background enables us to work on a wide variety of items with attention to detail."

Custom jewelry services form a core part of the offerings. The in-house jeweler handles design and creation of pieces tailored to client specifications. This includes work on bridal and engagement items as well as other expressions meant to mark special occasions. Engraving adds personalization, while modifications to existing pieces allow for updates or enhancements. All steps from initial concept to final polishing occur in the same location.

Jewelry repair and restoration follow similar in-house protocols. The team addresses polishing needs, crystal cutting requirements, and other restoration elements for items brought in for service. The controlled environment supports consistency across projects without reliance on external vendors.

Watch and clock repair and restoration represent another specialized area. The master's service all brands and models, covering quartz, mechanical, and electric mechanisms. Work includes full disassembly, cleaning, part replacement where necessary, and reassembly to functional standards. Vintage or heirloom timepieces receive particular care to preserve original characteristics during restoration.

"Working alongside my son allows us to blend established methods with ongoing learning in the field," continued Hirzinger. "It ensures that each project receives care from multiple perspectives within the same tradition."

House calls extend the service reach for clock repair and restoration. Technicians travel to homes, apartments, businesses, or boats to perform assessments and repairs on site. This option addresses situations where the transport of larger or delicate clocks presents challenges. The service maintains the same standards applied in the workshop setting.

Service areas encompass Broward and Palm Beach counties in Florida. Coverage also includes Louisiana, the Bahamas, and additional locations worldwide as requested. The flexibility supports clients who prefer not to visit the store or who require on-location attention for specific items.

The process for any service begins with an assessment of the item in question. For custom jewelry, discussions establish the desired outcome before design work commences. Repairs involve the identification of issues followed by targeted fixes using appropriate tools and techniques. Restoration of timepieces requires knowledge of historical mechanisms to return functionality while respecting the piece's history.

The business model centers on personalized experiences that foster client trust. Assistance combines professional guidance with an environment that reflects household warmth. The goal remains to create ongoing relationships through reliable workmanship rather than one-time transactions. This approach shapes interactions from initial consultation through project completion.

Sales of fine jewelry, watches, and clocks occur alongside the service offerings. Selections reflect the same quality standards upheld in repair and custom work. Clients may browse collections in person or through available online options before deciding on purchases or service needs.

The accumulated experience of the team supports the handling of diverse projects. Simple maintenance tasks receive the same care as complex restorations. The European training background proves valuable when dealing with intricate mechanisms or detailed jewelry work. Precision remains the guiding principle across all activities.

Joseph Gabriel Hirzinger contributes to the daily operations by applying his training in tandem with his father. The generational structure helps sustain the skill levels required for master-level results. This setup distinguishes the operation through its integrated family-based expertise.

Boat owners and clients with large clocks particularly benefit from the house call provision. The service eliminates unnecessary movement of heavy items and allows repairs in the original setting. Similar convenience applies to business or apartment locations where transport logistics might otherwise complicate the process.

Every project stays under the direct supervision of the master craftsmen. Control over each phase supports adherence to timelines and quality benchmarks established by the team. The in-house model reduces variables that could affect outcomes in outsourced scenarios.

The company maintains operations with a foundation rooted in the principles learned during training abroad. This foundation informs the handling of contemporary requests while preserving traditional methods where applicable. Clients gain access to services that draw directly from decades of specialized preparation.

Josef & Joseph operates as a provider of fine jewelry, watches, and clocks. The business specializes in custom design, engraving, repair, restoration, and related services performed in-house by the father-son team. It delivers personalized experiences to clients in designated regions and beyond through its combination of European-trained expertise and convenient service options.
