Skin Elevé Announces Introduction of Injectable Wrinkle Treatment Across Expanded Service Areas in Los Angeles

April 13, 2026

CHATSWORTH, CA - April 13, 2026 -
Skin Elevé, a medical spa based in Chatsworth, California, has announced the availability of its injectable wrinkle treatment service, commonly referred to as tox or Botox, across additional communities in the northwest San Fernando Valley. The expansion includes service access for clients in Simi Valley, Northridge, Porter Ranch, West Hills, Reseda, and Canoga Park, reflecting the organization?s continued growth within the region.

The newly expanded offering focuses on a minimally invasive cosmetic procedure that addresses visible signs of aging, such as fine lines and dynamic wrinkles. The treatment works by temporarily relaxing targeted facial muscles, helping soften the appearance of expression lines that develop over time from repetitive movement and natural aging.

Skin Elevé operates as a medically guided aesthetic clinic, where procedures are performed by trained professionals under clinical protocols. The organization emphasizes a structured consultation process prior to treatment, allowing each client?s facial anatomy, skin condition, and aesthetic goals to be evaluated before any procedure is carried out.

According to the clinic, the injectable treatment is commonly used to treat areas such as forehead lines, frown lines between the eyebrows, and crow?s feet near the eyes. Results typically develop gradually over several days and can last for a few months, depending on the individual's response and treatment plan.

The decision to extend service availability into neighboring communities follows increased demand for non-surgical cosmetic procedures in Los Angeles County. Industry data continues to show a steady rise in interest in minimally invasive treatments, particularly among individuals seeking subtle, natural-looking changes rather than dramatic alterations.

Mary Bilbulyan, owner of Skin Elevé, stated that the expansion aligns with the clinic?s long-term approach to personalized care and medically informed aesthetics.

?Our focus has always been on delivering treatments that are carefully planned and appropriate for each individual,? said Mary Bilbulyan. ?Expanding access to this service allows more people in nearby communities to receive care that is guided by clinical standards and tailored to their needs.?

The injectable procedure offered at Skin Elevé is considered minimally invasive and typically does not require extended downtime. Most clients are able to resume normal daily activities shortly after their appointment. The process itself generally involves a series of small injections administered with precision to specific muscle groups responsible for dynamic facial lines.

Medical professionals in the aesthetic field often note that this type of treatment is most effective when used as part of a broader skin management plan. At Skin Elevé, clients are guided through a consultation process that may include recommendations for complementary services such as facials, microneedling, or laser-based skin treatments, depending on individual goals and skin condition.

The clinic?s approach reflects a broader trend within aesthetic medicine that prioritizes gradual improvement and long-term skin health. Rather than focusing on immediate transformation, providers increasingly emphasize consistency, follow-up care, and integration with overall skincare routines.

Skin Elevé?s facility in Chatsworth serves as the primary location for consultations and treatments. The clinic operates in a boutique setting, providing a private, structured environment for clients undergoing medical aesthetic procedures.

In addition to injectable services, the organization offers a range of treatments that address various skin concerns, including laser hair removal, skin rejuvenation procedures, and full-face treatment plans. Each service is positioned within a framework that combines clinical oversight with individualized planning.

The expansion into surrounding areas is expected to improve accessibility for clients who previously needed to travel farther for appointments. As communities such as Northridge and Simi Valley continue to experience residential growth, local demand for medical spa services has increased alongside population changes and evolving lifestyle preferences.

As part of the rollout, Skin Elevé has maintained its consultation-first model, which includes an initial assessment before any procedure is scheduled. This step is intended to ensure that clients receive accurate information about expected outcomes, treatment timelines, and any potential considerations related to their skin type or medical history.

The clinic also adheres to the regulatory standards applicable to medical spas in California, including sanitation protocols, informed consent practices, and the use of FDA-approved products and techniques, as applicable.

Mary Bilbulyan noted that maintaining consistent standards across all services remains a priority as the clinic expands its reach.

?Growth does not change the way treatments are approached,? Mary Bilbulyan said. ?Each procedure is still performed with attention to detail, safety, and the goal of achieving results that align with the client?s natural features.?

The introduction of this injectable treatment across additional service areas reflects a continued shift toward non-surgical cosmetic options within the broader healthcare and wellness landscape. As more individuals explore ways to address early signs of aging, clinics such as Skin Elevé are adapting their services to meet demand while maintaining structured clinical practices.

Skin Elevé is located at 10316 CA-27 #B, Chatsworth, CA 91311, and operates by appointment. Additional information about services, consultation scheduling, and treatment availability can be found on the company?s website or by contacting the clinic directly at 747-202-0304.
