

Marshall Pediatric Therapy Expands Comprehensive Services to Meet Growing Demand for Early Intervention in Lexington

April 15, 2026

LEXINGTON, KY - April 15, 2026 -
Marshall Pediatric Therapy in Lexington has expanded its comprehensive therapy services to address the increasing demand for early childhood intervention throughout Central Kentucky. The expansion responds to growing awareness among parents and healthcare providers about the critical importance of early therapeutic support for children with developmental needs.

The Lexington-based clinic now offers nine specialized service areas including intensive therapy, mental health therapy, psychological services, speech therapy, physical therapy, occupational therapy, ABA therapy, behavior supports, and specialty services. This comprehensive approach allows the clinic to serve families from Lexington, Winchester, Frankfort, Paris, Lawrenceburg, and surrounding communities with integrated care under one roof.

"The demand for pediatric therapy services has grown significantly as more families recognize that early intervention can dramatically improve outcomes for children with developmental challenges," said Pam Marshall, OTR/L, founder of Marshall Pediatric Therapy. "Our expanded services ensure that children throughout Central Kentucky have access to the specialized support they need during their most formative years."

The clinic's intensive therapy program provides concentrated, specialized sessions designed to help children make significant progress in shorter timeframes. Mental health services incorporate play-based therapy, emotional support, and trauma-informed care, with licensed providers taking a collaborative approach to social-emotional wellness.

Speech therapy services address communication delays, articulation issues, stuttering, and feeding difficulties while providing specialized support for children with autism spectrum disorder and developmental delays. Physical therapy focuses on enhancing strength, balance, and coordination, supporting gross motor development and mobility for children with conditions including cerebral palsy and developmental delays.

Occupational therapy services help children build fine motor skills, independence, and sensory processing abilities necessary for daily activities such as dressing, feeding, and writing. The clinic's ABA therapy program improves social, communication, and learning skills through evidence-based positive reinforcement techniques.

"Our integrated team-based approach means that children receive coordinated care across multiple disciplines, which research shows leads to better outcomes," added Marshall. "When speech therapists, occupational therapists, and behavior specialists work together, they can address a child's needs more comprehensively than any single discipline working alone."

The expansion comes as national data indicates rising diagnosis rates for developmental conditions in children. According to recent studies, approximately one in six children in the United States has a developmental disability, with many benefiting from early therapeutic intervention.

Marshall Pediatric Therapy maintains a family-centered philosophy that emphasizes collaboration between therapists, children, and caregivers. The clinic's warm and welcoming environment helps children feel comfortable during therapy sessions, which therapists note contributes to improved engagement and progress.

Marshall Pediatric Therapy serves as a comprehensive pediatric therapy provider for families throughout Fayette County and Central Kentucky. The clinic specializes in evidence-based interventions delivered by experienced clinicians who focus on achieving measurable outcomes for each child's unique developmental journey.
