

Pyzer Criminal Lawyers Prioritises Accessible Criminal Defence Representation for Clients Throughout Ontario

April 29, 2026

YORK, ON - April 29, 2026 -
Pyzer Criminal Lawyers, a Toronto-based criminal defence law firm, continues its work providing accessible criminal defence representation to clients facing criminal charges across Ontario. The firm, founded in 2002 by Jonathan Pyzer, has built its practice on the principle that experienced defence should be available to anyone navigating the criminal justice system, regardless of where they live in the province.

From its downtown Toronto office, the firm handles matters for clients throughout the Greater Toronto Area and surrounding regions, including Mississauga, Brampton, Scarborough, Hamilton, Barrie, Oshawa, and Newmarket. This broad reach reflects a deliberate approach and the firm?s commitment to representing clients wherever they are located. Ontario residents should not have their defence options limited by geography, particularly when facing charges that could affect their freedom, employment, and family relationships.

The firm's legal team brings over two decades of courtroom experience to every matter they take on. That experience spans the full range of offences, from assault and driving-related charges to drug offences, property offences, sexual offences, weapons charges, and homicide matters. The firm also represents young offenders and handles bail hearings on short notice, which can be critical when a person has been detained and needs immediate legal assistance.

A representative from the firm noted that accessibility is not just about geography. ?People call us from all over Ontario, often during the worst moment of their lives. We answer the phone at any hour, we offer free case evaluations, and we make sure the person on the other end understands what they're facing before anything else happens. That?s the standard we set for ourselves.?

The firm's approach prioritises three things. Thorough preparation for every case, clear communication with clients throughout the process, and a determined effort to pursue every realistic avenue of defence. This means examining the circumstances of an arrest, the conduct of investigating officers, the admissibility of evidence, and any procedural issues that may affect the prosecution's case. It also means advising clients honestly about the realistic range of outcomes for their situation, rather than making promises about results that no lawyer can guarantee.

Pyzer Criminal Lawyers offers criminal defence services across Ontario, covering everything from pre-charge advice through trial representation and, where appropriate, appeals. The team includes Jonathan Pyzer, Jasmine Mann, and supporting legal staff who work together on client matters. This collaborative structure means cases benefit from multiple perspectives rather than resting on one lawyer's workload.

Clients often come to the firm after their first interaction with the police, sometimes before charges have even been formally laid. Early involvement allows the defence team to advise on what to say, what not to say, and how to protect important legal rights from the outset. The firm also handles cases at later stages, including those where clients have already had initial court appearances or are approaching trial with unresolved concerns about their current representation.

Ontario's criminal justice system continues to handle a substantial volume of matters each year. Changes in legislation, court procedures, and sentencing approaches mean that representation by lawyers familiar with current practice can make a meaningful difference to how a case unfolds. Pyzer Criminal Lawyers provides that kind of informed representation, whether a matter is straightforward or involves multiple charges, complex evidence, or serious potential consequences.

For anyone facing criminal allegations in Ontario, the firm offers free initial case evaluations. These conversations are confidential and carry no obligation. The goal is simple: to give each person a realistic picture of their situation, explain the options available, and let them make an informed decision about how to proceed.
