April 28, 2026

SEARCY, AR - April 28, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Byron's Jewelry has introduced new bridal necklaces and accessories to its inventory ahead of the 2026 spring wedding season. The family-owned business, which opened in 1991, added the pieces following the April 17 release of a dedicated collection page on its website. These additions support couples planning ceremonies in White County and surrounding Arkansas communities.

The new selections include delicate pearl strands, sparkling diamond pendants, elegant gemstone necklaces, and vintage-inspired designs. They expand options available for wedding day coordination. The introduction aligns with the business receiving the 2025 White County Citizen Readers' Choice award in the jewelry category, as determined through community voting by the local newspaper.

Byron's Jewelry provides in-store consultations for couples exploring bridal selections. Staff members guide the process based on preferences and event details. Custom design projects begin with initial discussions, move to crafting, and conclude with quality inspection. Most custom orders reach completion within a few weeks, depending on project scope. Financing options support purchases, with staff members reviewing application details and explaining available plans and terms.

Josh Higginbotham, owner of Byron's Jewelry, stated, "We have introduced these new bridal necklaces and accessories to address the needs of couples planning spring weddings. The additions provide more choices for coordinated looks."

Higginbotham added, "Our team has supported local weddings since 1991. These updates build on that experience while maintaining focus on quality and service as recognized in the recent Readers' Choice award."

The business operates as an authorized dealer for Citizen watches. These timepieces serve as options for wedding party gifts. In-store repair services address resizing, cleaning, and maintenance requirements for pieces acquired through the store. Most standard repair jobs are completed in about one week. Estate jewelry selections present additional choices after inspection and restoration by the team.

The store location on East Race Avenue features wheelchair-accessible parking and an entrance. Walk-in visits support initial review of available items. Appointments allow for more extended discussions related to custom work or specific requirements. Customers from Searcy, Beebe, and nearby locations utilize the store for wedding-related preparations.

Byron's Jewelry maintains a cash for gold program. This includes on-site appraisals that consider weight, purity, and current market conditions. Approved transactions proceed with immediate payouts. The process functions as a direct transaction for customers managing existing items while acquiring new ones.

Operations focus on direct handling of all transactions and services. The team follows procedures developed over more than 35 years of combined industry experience. This framework supports both the acquisition of new pieces and the maintenance of items already owned. Community voting in the Readers' Choice program captures preferences across categories in the region. Byron's Jewelry has participated in the White County economy through its retail and service activities since its establishment.

The spring wedding season brings increased activity for ceremonies in Arkansas. Byron's Jewelry prepares through inventory management and service readiness. Consultations address style considerations, fit, and selections suited to the occasion. The new additions respond to feedback and preferences noted during prior customer interactions. Styles in the expanded collection range from timeless to contemporary approaches. These pieces support wedding coordination as well as wear beyond the event.

The business centers its practices on workmanship and consistent processes. This approach accommodates life events marked through jewelry selection and care. Team members apply standards refined across decades of operation in the area. The 2025 award recognition connects to the store's ongoing role in the community. Preparations for the 2026 season include standard updates to support expected demand.
