

Denver Real Estate School Opens Spring Enrollment With Weekly Start Dates

April 29, 2026

WESTMINSTER, CO - April 29, 2026 -

Denver Real Estate School has announced the opening of spring enrollment across its pre-licensing course offerings, with new class start dates available on a weekly basis. The enrollment period covers all three of the school's primary learning formats, including in-person instruction, live-streamed classes, and self-paced online courses, giving prospective students in Colorado a range of entry points as the spring season begins.

The school, based in Westminster, Colorado, is state-certified by the Colorado Division of Real Estate and the Division of Professions and Occupations, and offers pre-licensing education designed to prepare students for the Colorado real estate licensing exam. The availability of rolling weekly start dates is intended to remove scheduling barriers that have historically delayed prospective agents from beginning the licensing process.

The spring enrollment announcement comes at a period when real estate education providers across Colorado are seeing continued interest from individuals seeking to enter or re-enter the housing market as professionals. Weekly start dates allow students to begin coursework without waiting for a fixed semester or cohort schedule, a structure that the school has positioned as central to its enrollment model.

"Spring tends to be a time when a lot of people take that first step toward getting their real estate license," said Brandon Lyon of Denver Real Estate School. "Having new classes starting every week means no one has to wait. As soon as someone is ready to commit, there is a start date available for them, regardless of which format fits their schedule best."

In-person classes at the Westminster campus are structured to be completed within three weeks, with sessions held Tuesday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. The condensed format is designed for students who prefer a structured, classroom environment and want to move through the required 168 hours of state-approved pre-licensing education efficiently. New cohorts begin on a weekly basis, allowing students to enroll and start within days of their decision to pursue licensure.

For students who prefer remote participation, Denver Real Estate School offers a live-streamed class option that mirrors the in-person format through a virtual environment. The live-streamed format maintains instructor-led instruction and real-time engagement while accommodating students who are unable to attend in person. Evening live-stream sessions are also available for students managing other professional or personal commitments, with that track typically completed over approximately three months.

The school's online course option operates independently of a fixed schedule, allowing students to begin immediately upon enrollment. The online pre-licensing course includes 168 hours of state-approved content delivered through on-demand video, a digital course textbook, and supplementary study resources. Students enrolled in the online format have access to instructor support via phone and email during business hours, along with email support outside of business hours. The online track also includes a pass guarantee, subject to terms and conditions, which the school has noted reflects its confidence in the preparedness of its students ahead of the state licensing exam.

Denver Real Estate School's instruction is delivered by actively practicing real estate brokers, a distinction the school has emphasized as a differentiator in its curriculum design. Instruction from working professionals is intended to provide students with current market knowledge and practical context that extends beyond the statutory requirements covered in the licensing exam.

The school has also made financing available for its courses through a partnership with Affirm, allowing students to divide course costs into monthly payments at checkout. The availability of payment plans is presented as an accessibility measure intended to reduce financial friction for prospective students who may otherwise delay enrollment.

Spring enrollment is now open across all course formats. Prospective students can review upcoming class start dates and course options through the school's website. The weekly start date structure means students do not need to wait for a specific enrollment window and can plan their start date around their individual schedule.
