Fence Brothers Announces Residential and Commercial Fencing Services

May 01, 2026

KENTWOOD, MI - May 01, 2026 -
Fence Brothers, a family-owned fencing contractor operated by brothers Alec and Kyle Trierweiler, has announced a full range of residential and commercial fencing services across West Michigan. Founded in 2013, the company brings more than a decade of hands-on installation experience backed by a family with 34 years in the lumber industry.

Fence Brothers installs wood, vinyl, aluminum, and chain link fencing for homeowners and commercial property managers throughout West Michigan. The company's residential work accounts for approximately 75 percent of its projects, while commercial fencing, including perimeter security, athletic facility enclosures, temporary fencing, bollards, and gated access systems, represents a growing share of its operations. In addition to standard residential and commercial materials, the company installs ranch and agricultural fencing and is one of a small number of contractors in the region offering gate operator systems for both residential driveways and commercial access points.

Wood fencing remains the company's primary specialty. Crews build each fence on-site piece by piece rather than attaching pre-fabricated panels, using true 2x4 rails (actual two-inch by four-inch dimensions, not the thinner nominal lumber common in the industry) and 11/16-inch-thick pickets, which are nearly three-quarters of an inch and thicker than what most competitors install. The company sources white cedar directly from mills in Michigan's Upper Peninsula and planes the lumber in-house. The Trierweiler family's three decades in the West Michigan lumber industry drive the company's material selection, from choosing specific grades of cedar and pine to maintaining direct relationships with mills that supply wood suited to the region's freeze-thaw conditions.

The company manages all project coordination on behalf of the homeowner, including permit applications, Miss Dig utility locating (Michigan's underground utility marking service), property line verification, and HOA restriction review. Homeowners working with Fence Brothers do not need to contact their township office or utility provider separately. The company backs every fence with a five-year workmanship warranty covering structural concerns such as post movement and picket separation. The warranty extends to wood fences as well, which many contractors in the area exclude from their coverage.

Over the past decade, the number of fence contractors operating across West Michigan has increased significantly. With that growth, Fence Brothers has observed a corresponding rise in repair calls ? homeowners who hired crews using nominal-dimension lumber that shrinks and warps within a few seasons, or posts set without accounting for Michigan's freeze-thaw cycle, which pushes improperly anchored posts out of the ground over winter. The company's material sourcing, piece-by-piece construction method, and direct mill relationships are a direct response to those patterns in the local market.

"Kyle and I grew up around lumber. Our dad spent his career in the industry, and that's where we learned what separates materials that hold up from materials that don't," said Alec Trierweiler, Co-Owner of Fence Brothers. "We started this company because we knew we could build fences the right way, with wood we trust, posts set at the right depth for the soil, and enough attention to detail that the fence still looks good a decade later."
