

Tim Cox Earns Dan Clark Certified Speaker Designation as Part of Inaugural Class

May 11, 2026

Las Vegas, NV - May 11, 2026 -
Tim Cox, an international corporate keynote speaker and business performance expert based in Henderson, Nevada, has earned the designation of Dan Clark Certified Speaker as part of the inaugural class, a distinction awarded personally by Hall of Fame speaker Dan Clark following an intensive, highly selective mentorship and evaluation process.

The certification was awarded on April 27, 2026, in Salt Lake City and marks the first time Clark has formally recognized a group of speakers through his full body of work and has personally mentored and validated speakers at this level through a prolonged, hands-on process. This training included his Speak Like a Pro curriculum and decades of professional speaking experience.

Unlike traditional speaker certifications, the Dan Clark Certified Speaker designation requires more than content mastery. Candidates must demonstrate the ability to deliver keynote-level presentations under pressure, adapt messaging in real time, customize content to client needs, and maintain consistent audience engagement without reliance on scripted delivery.

As an already established keynote speaker working with corporate leadership teams and execution-focused organizations, Cox entered the program with a strong foundation and demonstrated the ability to elevate his delivery, adaptability, and audience impact to a higher standard under Clark?s direct mentorship.

To earn the designation, Cox demonstrated mastery of Clark?s Speak Like a Pro methodology, the ability to deliver keynote-caliber presentations directly in front of Clark at a professional standard, the capacity to perform effectively in front of large audiences, including 500+ attendees, real-time adaptability by adjusting presentation length and structure without notice, and the ability to engage, move, and connect with audiences consistently across formats.

?This isn?t about memorizing a speech. It?s about command of the room,? said Cox. ?You don?t fix chaos with motivation. You fix it with structure. And if you can?t adapt in the moment, you?re not leading, you?re reciting.?

?I don?t put my name on many things,? said Clark. ?Tim Cox already knew how to speak, and he spoke well. What he proved here is that he can take it to another level, command a room, adapt in the moment, and truly connect. That?s what earns this distinction.?

His work centers on helping leadership teams install the structure required to drive execution, accountability, and measurable results under pressure.

?I?m not a theorist. I?m an operator,? Cox added. ?Most teams don?t need another talk. They need something that actually changes how they operate on Monday.?

This certification places Cox among the inaugural class of speakers selected through a highly selective, first-time certification process led by Dan Clark. The announcement signals a continued expansion of Cox?s speaking platform, with a focus on delivering keynote presentations to leadership teams at scale, emphasizing measurable impact in execution, decision-making, and organizational performance for leadership teams, founder-led companies, and execution-heavy organizations.

Tim Cox provides corporate and organizational keynote speeches locally in Las Vegas, nationally, and internationally.
