

Stoney Oak Fence Celebrates 500 Completed Projects

May 06, 2026

AUSTIN, TX - May 06, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Stoney Oak Fence, an owner-operated fencing contractor serving western Wisconsin, has completed more than 500 residential fence installations since opening in November 2022. The milestone reflects steady growth for the company, which holds the only American Fence Association certification in the region and maintains a 5.0 rating across 39 Google reviews.

Founded by Ryan Stein, the company installs vinyl, wood, chain link, aluminum, and ranch fencing for homeowners across a corridor that includes Eau Claire, Menomonie, Altoona, and Chippewa Falls. Vinyl Privacy Fences and Wood Fences represent the majority of what is asked for by customers. Every project uses American-made materials sourced from domestic manufacturers across all fence types.

The company handles the full permit process for homeowners in townships that require one, including neighbor affidavit forms and coordination with local offices. Stein holds both a Wisconsin dwelling contractor license and a general contractor qualifier credential, which allow the company to pull permits directly rather than passing that responsibility to the homeowner. Permit rules vary by city and township across the region, and many homeowners are unsure what is required before a fence can go up. That permit-handling capability, combined with a same-day response commitment on all inquiries, has been a central factor in the company's growth from a single crew to more than 500 completed projects in just over three years.

Climate shapes how the company builds. Temperatures in western Wisconsin regularly swing from well below zero in January to the upper 80s in July, putting repeated stress on fence components through freeze-thaw cycles. To address this, Stoney Oak Fence drives fence posts to a minimum depth of four feet ? a method designed to prevent frost heave in the heavy clay soils common throughout the area ? and uses thicker-than-standard 5/8-inch wood pickets with a three-rail system on all wood installations. Metal posts are standard on wood fences. On non-wood installations, the company provides a 10-year workmanship warranty paired with lifetime manufacturer material warranties on vinyl, aluminum, and chain link.

Stein personally visits every job site during installation, a practice he has maintained since founding the company. His hands-on involvement extends to material selection and estimating. The company uses no third-party scheduling or answering services, and every inquiry ? whether for a quote, a permit question, or a follow-up on an active project ? gets a direct response within the same business day. That accessibility matters most during installation: if a question comes up about post placement, a property line, or a gate configuration, the homeowner reaches Stein directly rather than waiting for a message to work its way through a call center.

"A lot of homeowners call us after a bad experience somewhere else, and they just want someone who will walk them through the whole thing from start to finish," said Ryan Stein, Owner of Stoney Oak Fence. "We handle the permits, we help them pick the right material for their yard, and we make sure they are not chasing down paperwork or wondering when the crew is going to show up."
