

Bullyan RV Offers De-Winterization Services for Spring RV Preparation

May 04, 2026

DULUTH, MN - May 04, 2026 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bullyan RV Center is providing de-winterization services to assist RV owners in preparing vehicles for the upcoming travel season in northern Minnesota. As temperatures rise, many owners seek to reverse winterization procedures and ensure systems are ready for road use. The dealership's service department handles these seasonal maintenance tasks as part of its broader RV repair and preparation offerings.

De-winterization typically involves several standard steps to restore an RV after storage. These include reconnecting water systems, flushing antifreeze from lines and tanks, checking and testing plumbing components, inspecting batteries, and verifying appliance and heating system function. Additional checks often cover tire pressure, seals, awnings, and overall vehicle condition to identify any issues that may have developed during the winter months.

Bullyan RV's 24 service bays and trained technicians support a range of preparation work. The facility accommodates everything from basic de-winterization to more extensive maintenance and repairs. Owners can schedule appointments for de-winterization alongside other service needs such as general inspections or system testing.

The dealership reports that de-winterization helps reduce the risk of leaks, system failures, or performance issues when RVs return to active use. By addressing these items early in the season, owners can focus on trip planning rather than unexpected repairs once travel begins. The service team provides estimates and works with insurance providers when applicable, though de-winterization itself is generally considered routine seasonal maintenance.

George Meger, the Service Manager, commented that, "When it comes to getting your campers ready for summer, the most important part is flushing the plumbing system properly, so all the antifreeze is drained from tanks, pipes, faucets, etc."

Bullyan RV Center operates a 48,500 square foot facility in Duluth, Minnesota. The dealership maintains a full-service approach that includes sales of new and used RVs as well as comprehensive service and parts support. With 24 dedicated service bays, the team addresses maintenance, repairs, hitch installations, and larger projects, including insurance-related body work.

The de-winterization offering aligns with the dealership's role in supporting year-round RV ownership. Many regional owners store vehicles during cold months and require professional assistance to safely return them to service. Bullyan RV's technicians have experience with a variety of RV makes and models, enabling consistent handling of seasonal transitions.

Additional service capabilities at the location include general maintenance, system diagnostics, and preparation for both short local outings and longer journeys. The parts department stocks common components to minimize downtime during service visits. This infrastructure allows the dealership to manage de-winterization efficiently while addressing any related concerns identified during inspection.

Bullyan RV has provided these services as part of its operations since 1954. The family-owned dealership has expanded its physical plant and technical capabilities over time while keeping customer support central to its process. The current facility supports both sales and service under one roof, streamlining the experience for owners bringing vehicles in for seasonal work.

For many RV enthusiasts in the Northland, proper de-winterization marks the practical start of the travel season. The process restores water, electrical, and mechanical systems to operational status and allows owners to verify readiness before heading to regional destinations. Bullyan RV's service team performs this work using established procedures designed to meet manufacturer guidelines for different RV types.

The dealership encourages owners to schedule de-winterization appointments in advance as demand typically increases with improving weather. Early preparation helps avoid delays once camping and travel schedules become active. Service advisors can discuss specific vehicle requirements and provide timelines during the booking process.

Bullyan RV Center remains a resource for both new RV buyers and long-time owners seeking reliable maintenance support. The combination of sales inventory and extensive service facilities positions the dealership to assist at every stage of RV ownership, including the annual transition from winter storage to active use.
