All Pro Thornton Deck Builders Expands Services Across Colorado

May 07, 2026

THORNTON, CO - May 07, 2026 -
All Pro Thornton Deck Builders, a licensed and insured deck building contractor based in Thornton, Colorado, announced expanded service capacity for the 2026 season, now offering a broader range of outdoor renovation projects across the northern Denver metropolitan area. The company, which has served homeowners in Adams and Weld counties for over a decade, added pool deck construction, shade structures, and multi-level composite deck installation to its growing list of services.

The expansion comes at a time when homeowner investment in outdoor living spaces has accelerated across Colorado and the broader U.S. market. Industry data from Remodeling Magazine's Cost vs. Value Report indicates that wood deck additions typically recoup 65 to 75 percent of their installation cost at resale, making deck building one of the higher-performing exterior upgrades available to homeowners. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders works with materials from manufacturers, including Trex and Azek, offering both composite decking and natural wood options such as pressure-treated lumber and cedar. The company handles each project from initial design consultation through permitting, construction, and final inspection.

Colorado's Front Range climate presents specific challenges for outdoor construction that influence both material selection and structural design. Temperature swings that can exceed 50 degrees in a single day, combined with intense UV exposure at elevation and freeze-thaw cycles through winter and spring, accelerate wear on untreated wood surfaces. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders factors these regional conditions into every project recommendation, advising homeowners on material options that match both their aesthetic preferences and the performance demands of the local environment. The company noted that requests for composite decking have increased steadily over the past several years, consistent with a national trend in which wood-plastic composites are forecast to grow at an 8.67 percent compound annual rate through 2031, according to industry research firm Mordor Intelligence.

"We have watched the demand for quality deck installation grow steadily over the past ten years in this part of Colorado," said David Miller, Owner of All Pro Thornton Deck Builders. "Families here want outdoor spaces they can actually use ? a place to cook, gather, or just sit outside after work. Our job is to build something that holds up to the climate, meets code, and fits their budget."

The company's project workflow follows a structured sequence that begins with a free on-site consultation and moves through design planning, municipal permitting, material procurement, construction, and a final walkthrough with the homeowner. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders manages the building permit process as a standard part of its scope rather than leaving it to the homeowner, an approach that has become increasingly important as average deck project values rise and code compliance carries greater financial stakes. The company reported that multi-feature projects ? those combining a primary deck structure with additions such as pergolas, porch extensions, or integrated patio hardscapes ? now represent a growing share of its annual work.

Residential demand for deck construction across the United States has remained strong beyond the initial pandemic-era surge. A 2025 market study found that residential customers accounted for nearly 70 percent of total decking volume nationally, a segment forecast to continue growing at a 5.37 percent annual rate through 2031. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders attributed part of its own growth to the broader shift toward outdoor living as a home investment rather than a discretionary upgrade, noting that homeowners in the northern Denver metro area increasingly view deck construction as a means of adding functional square footage and long-term property value.

All Pro Thornton Deck Builders holds active licensing, bonding, and insurance credentials with the state of Colorado and offers a three-year warranty on completed projects. The company's service area extends beyond Thornton to include Denver, Westminster, Commerce City, Aurora, Brighton, and Wheat Ridge, among other communities. Its team provides free consultations and project estimates, working with homeowners on deck design, porch installation, patio and hardscape construction, pergola placement, and deck repair or restoration for aging outdoor structures.
