Stone Fabrication Firm Extends Countertop Services Across Tri-State Region to Meet Demand in Mountain and Lakeside Communities

May 14, 2026

Cumming, Georgia - May 14, 2026 -
Atlanta Stone Creations, a stone fabrication and installation company based in Cumming, Georgia, has expanded its service area to cover communities across three states, extending beyond its established metro Atlanta base into mountain and lakeside markets in western North Carolina and upstate South Carolina. The firm, which has operated for more than 20 years and holds Cambria Premier Partner certification, now serves locations including Asheville, Highlands, and Cashiers in North Carolina and Greenville, Lake Jocassee, Salem, and Six Mile in South Carolina, in addition to its existing Georgia coverage across Alpharetta, Roswell, Marietta, and the broader metro Atlanta corridor.

The expansion reflects demand patterns the firm has tracked in the southern Appalachian region. The Highlands-Cashiers plateau, situated at elevations above 3,500 feet in the Nantahala National Forest, has experienced custom home construction activity driven in part by buyers from Atlanta, Charlotte, Nashville, and other southeastern metropolitan areas. The area is approximately two and a half hours from Atlanta by road, placing it within reach of homeowners who have existing relationships with metro Atlanta contractors and fabricators. A comparable pattern is observable in the upstate South Carolina lake communities around Jocassee and Keowee, where residential construction has expanded alongside population growth in the region.

Atlanta Stone Creations fabricates and installs countertops in six stone types: granite, quartz, quartzite, marble, porcelain, and soapstone. The range of materials reflects the varied design requirements of the communities the firm now serves. Mountain and lakeside homes in western North Carolina and upstate South Carolina frequently incorporate stone elements across kitchens, bathrooms, and outdoor living areas, with material selections influenced by the architectural styles prevalent in those markets. Quartzite and granite are commonly specified for their durability in environments subject to temperature variation, while marble and quartz are selected for interior applications where visual consistency or lower maintenance requirements are a consideration.

The firm operates a fabrication facility in Cumming, Georgia, where all cutting, edge profiling, and finishing is performed in-house using digital templating technology. Digital templates capture measurements at the project site before any stone is cut. The firm's installation teams travel from the fabrication facility to project locations across the three-state service area, completing standard kitchen installations in a single day.

Leo Carvalho, owner of Atlanta Stone Creations, commented on the expansion. "The firm began receiving enquiries from homeowners and builders in the mountain communities several years ago, and the volume has increased steadily," Carvalho said. "Many of those clients are already familiar with the firm's work in metro Atlanta, either through a previous project in their primary residence or through a referral from a builder or designer the firm has worked with. Extending the service area was a response to that existing demand rather than a speculative decision."

The firm's Cambria Premier Partner designation applies across the expanded service area. Cambria, a quartz surface manufacturer based in Minnesota, grants Premier Partner status to fabricators that meet specified standards for fabrication quality and installation practice. The certification provides access to Cambria's full design palette. Atlanta Stone Creations stated that clients in the North Carolina and South Carolina markets have access to the same Cambria product range and warranty terms as clients in Georgia.

The firm maintains a full-slab showroom at its Cumming facility, where clients can view and select individual slabs rather than relying on small sample chips. Atlanta Stone Creations sources stone from quarries and distributors internationally, and the showroom inventory includes granite, quartzite, marble, and soapstone alongside the Cambria quartz collection. The firm noted that clients from the expanded service areas are invited to visit the showroom or to coordinate slab selection remotely with the design team.
