All Pro Thornton Deck Builders Expands Deck Design Services

May 14, 2026

THORNTON, CO - May 14, 2026 -
Colorado contractor adds composite decking and multi-zone outdoor living options ahead of peak building season

All Pro Thornton Deck Builders, a licensed deck design and installation contractor serving the Denver metro area for over a decade, announced an expansion of its residential deck design services to meet growing homeowner demand for custom outdoor living spaces. The expanded service lineup, now available across Adams and Weld counties, includes new composite decking options, multi-level deck configurations, and integrated shade structure planning. The company said it has added capacity to accommodate projects from initial design consultation through permitting, material selection, and final installation.

The expansion comes as national data points to a sustained increase in outdoor living investment. According to the International Casual Furnishings Association, 77 percent of U.S. homeowners say they wish they spent more time outside, and nearly 60 percent plan to invest in their outdoor spaces in 2026. Industry analysts project the composite decking segment alone will grow at double-digit rates over the next several years, driven by homeowners who are choosing to upgrade existing properties rather than move. Deck Builders said it has responded to this demand by adding composite and PVC material options alongside its existing natural wood and Trex product lines, giving homeowners a wider range of climate-appropriate materials suited to Colorado weather conditions.

The company's expanded deck design and installation process now begins with an on-site consultation where the project team evaluates the property layout, soil conditions, sun exposure patterns, and the homeowner's intended use for the space. From there, All Pro Thornton Deck Builders develops a detailed design plan that accounts for structural load requirements, material compatibility with local climate conditions, and compliance with Colorado residential building codes. The company said that typical projects move from initial consultation to completed installation within two to four weeks, depending on the scope and complexity of the build.

"We have seen a clear shift in what Colorado homeowners want from their decks," said David Miller, Owner of All Pro Thornton Deck Builders. "It is no longer just about adding square footage to the backyard. People are asking for multi-zone layouts with areas for dining, relaxing, and entertaining, and they want materials that hold up to our altitude, UV exposure, and temperature swings without constant upkeep. This expansion allows us to meet those expectations from the first design meeting all the way through the final walkthrough."

Colorado's combination of high altitude, intense UV exposure, and wide daily temperature swings places distinct demands on outdoor building materials. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders said it now offers homeowners a side-by-side comparison of natural wood, pressure-treated lumber, composite, and PVC decking during the consultation phase, with guidance on long-term maintenance costs and expected lifespan for each option. According to industry data, wood deck additions recoup approximately 63 percent of their cost at resale, a figure the company said has contributed to increased interest from homeowners looking to improve property value without relocating.

All Pro Thornton Deck Builders is licensed, bonded, and insured by the state of Colorado. The company offers deck design and installation, custom deck construction, deck repair and rebuilding, porch construction, patio and hardscape work, pool decks, and shade structures, including pergolas. All projects are completed in compliance with local building codes, and the company handles permitting on behalf of homeowners. The expanded service is available to residential properties throughout the Thornton and Denver, Colorado metro area, including surrounding communities in Adams and Weld counties.

The company noted that demand for multi-level decks, integrated pergola structures, and outdoor kitchen-ready platforms has increased among its Colorado clients over the past year. All Pro Thornton Deck Builders said it has expanded its design team's capacity to handle combination outdoor living projects that blend deck construction with patio hardscaping, shade structures, and custom railings within a single scope of work. The company handles all aspects of the permitting process on behalf of homeowners across its service area, including jurisdictions within Thornton, Denver, Arvada, Westminster, Broomfield, and surrounding communities.
