

Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite Addresses Rising Child Custody Concerns for Fernandina Beach Families

May 20, 2026

JACKSONVILLE, FL - May 20, 2026 -

Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite, a Jacksonville-based family and criminal law firm, has expanded its educational resources to address the growing number of child custody inquiries from families in Fernandina Beach and Nassau County. The firm's Fernandina Beach office has noted an increase in questions about parenting schedules, communication protocols, and transportation arrangements as more families seek guidance on navigating Florida's custody framework.

The expanded guidance builds on the firm's earlier custody announcement and focuses on practical considerations that affect Nassau County families establishing parenting plans. Common concerns include developing workable time-sharing schedules, establishing effective communication methods between separated parents, and addressing transportation logistics when parents live in different areas of the county.

"Parents in Nassau County often face unique challenges related to distance and scheduling, particularly when one parent resides in Fernandina Beach and the other lives elsewhere in the county or in neighboring Jacksonville," said Jay Henderlite, Managing Partner at Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite. "Understanding how to structure parenting arrangements that maintain stability for children while accommodating these logistical realities is essential for creating sustainable custody agreements."

The firm's guidance addresses several key areas that frequently arise in custody matters. Transportation considerations have become particularly relevant for Nassau County families, where parents may need to coordinate exchanges across significant distances. The firm notes that clear agreements about pick-up and drop-off locations, responsibility for transportation costs, and contingency plans for schedule changes can prevent future disputes.

Communication between parents represents another critical component of successful custody arrangements. The firm's resources outline various communication tools and methods that help parents maintain necessary contact while minimizing conflict. These include dedicated parenting applications, structured email protocols, and establishing boundaries around communication timing and frequency.

Maintaining consistency for children across two households emerges as a primary concern for many families. The firm's guidance emphasizes strategies for coordinating bedtimes, homework routines, extracurricular activities, and discipline approaches between homes. This consistency helps children adapt to custody arrangements while preserving their sense of stability and routine.

The firm also addresses how custody arrangements may need to evolve as children grow and family circumstances change. Factors such as children's school schedules, participation in sports or activities, and developmental needs often require adjustments to initial parenting plans. Understanding the modification process and planning for potential changes helps families avoid future legal complications.

Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite distinguishes itself as the only practice in Northeast Florida with three Board Certified Marital & Family Law Experts serving as managing partners. The firm maintains three office locations throughout Jacksonville, with its Fernandina Beach office specifically serving families throughout Nassau County. The firm provides representation for various family structures, including mothers, fathers, grandparents, same-sex couples, and unmarried parents navigating custody matters. Beyond child custody, the firm offers comprehensive family law services including divorce, child support, modifications, and parenting plan development, as well as criminal law representation.
