Montego Bay, Jamaica - Internet Income Jamaica hosted their latest bootcamp on the weekend of April 9 - 10, 2016 in Montego Bay and by all indications it came off very well with the attendants. The students of the workshop learned about the online opportunity of freelancing.

The event was held at Toby?s Resort in Montego Bay, Jamaica, and featured the experienced Internet Income Jamaica trainers Sue-Tanya McHorgh, Michael Rainford and Lennworth Morris. The beautiful surroundings of the resort contrasted with the intense and engaging lessons of the workshop.

Each member of the Internet Income Jamaica team has their own unique expertise which allowed the participants to learn about a range of freelancing skills, styles and approaches. For example, the lead trainer, Sue-Tanya has over five years of experience in the world of online work. She began freelancing after coming across an interview that the CEO of Internet Income Jamaica, Alicia Lyttle did with Cliff Hughes on Nationwide News Network. Sue-Tanya had earlier been laid off her job at a call center and was looking for viable options to earn money online. She currently has specialties in virtual assistance, data entry, online research, video editing and transcription.

?What I would like persons to know is that earning a living online from freelancing is very possible. In our boot-camps we teach people the exact platforms and practices that we use to earn money online,? remarked Sue-Tanya.

Students at the workshop brought their laptops and followed the instructions presented to them. The boot-camp featured lessons on how to determine what persons can sell online, how to get paid for doing online work in USD and the types of trusted sites that persons should be working on. During the sessions, the students set up their online profiles and listed their services.

Internet Income Jamaica is based out of Kingston, but by popular demand, the team traveled to Montego Bay providing two days of hands on training to eager participants. The company hosts many types of boot-camps which show different ways of earning money online. More information about these sessions can be found on their website at http://InternetIncomeJamaica.com.
