ITS Environmental Services Highlights IICRC Certified Expertise in Biohazard and Restoration Services

May 13, 2026

YAPHANK, NY - May 13, 2026 -
ITS Environmental Services, a comprehensive disaster restoration and extreme cleanup service provider serving the New York, Long Island, and Tri-State area, emphasizes the critical importance of industry certifications in ensuring safe and effective biohazard cleaning, disinfection, and restoration services. The company maintains IICRC certification status, with technicians holding specialized CEICR credentials for infection control according to ICRA guidelines.

The emphasis on certification standards comes as property owners and facility managers increasingly seek qualified professionals for complex environmental restoration projects. Industry certifications provide assurance that restoration companies follow established protocols and maintain the expertise necessary for handling hazardous materials, biohazard situations, and comprehensive property restoration.

"Certification represents more than just credentials on paper; it demonstrates our commitment to following industry-established protocols for safety and effectiveness," said Doug Baruchin, spokesperson for ITS Environmental Services. "When dealing with biohazard situations, water damage, or fire restoration, property owners need confidence that technicians understand the complexities of proper remediation and the health implications of improper handling."

The IICRC (Institute of Inspection Cleaning and Restoration Certification) sets global standards for the inspection, cleaning, and restoration industries. Companies maintaining this certification must meet rigorous requirements for technical expertise, ethical business practices, and ongoing education. The CEICR certification specifically addresses infection control protocols, particularly relevant for biohazard cleaning services including crime scene cleanup, unattended death situations, and virus disinfection.

ITS Environmental Services applies these certification standards across its comprehensive service offerings, which include water damage restoration, fire damage and smoke odor removal, asbestos abatement, and oil, fuel, and chemical spill cleanup. The company also provides specialized biohazard cleaning services encompassing crime scene cleanup, blood cleanup, suicide cleanup, animal damage cleanup, extreme cleaning, and hoarder cleaning situations.

The importance of proper certification becomes particularly evident in complex restoration scenarios. Water damage restoration requires understanding of moisture detection, structural drying, and mold prevention. Fire damage restoration demands knowledge of smoke behavior, soot removal techniques, and odor elimination processes. Biohazard cleaning necessitates strict adherence to bloodborne pathogen standards and proper disposal protocols.

Beyond environmental restoration and biohazard services, the company offers virus and bacteria disinfection services, property restoration and rebuilding, and pack out, moving, and storage services. Each service area benefits from the systematic approach and quality standards that certification programs establish.

With over 10 years of experience in the restoration industry, ITS Environmental Services maintains 24/7 availability for emergency response situations. The company holds all necessary licenses and insurance coverage required for handling hazardous materials and performing comprehensive restoration work.

The combination of industry certification, specialized training, and extensive field experience positions the company to address the full spectrum of disaster restoration and extreme cleanup challenges that property owners face. From immediate emergency response to complete property restoration, certified professionals ensure that each project meets established industry standards for safety and effectiveness.
