Kozie Clothes Expands Sensory Therapeutic and Adaptive Medical Clothing Line Founded by Pediatric Occupational Therapist

POTTSTOWN, PA - May 15, 2026 -
Kozie Clothes, a specialized manufacturer of sensory-friendly and adaptive clothing for children, continues to address the growing need for therapeutic apparel designed specifically for children with autism spectrum disorders, sensory processing conditions, and special medical needs. Founded in 2013 by pediatric occupational therapist Susan Donohoe, the company has developed comprehensive clothing solutions based on decades of clinical experience working directly with children facing sensory and medical challenges.

The expansion of Kozie Clothes reflects increasing awareness among parents and healthcare providers about the importance of appropriate clothing for children with special needs. Drawing from Donohoe's extensive background in sensory integration, SIPT testing, ADHD support, burn and hand therapy, and physical education, the company designs each garment to provide therapeutic benefits while maintaining style and comfort that allows children to feel confident in their daily activities.

"After years of working with children in clinical settings, I recognized a significant gap in the market for clothing that could actually support therapeutic goals while allowing kids to express themselves through fashion," said Susan Donohoe, founder and CEO of Kozie Clothes. "Every design decision we make stems from real-world observations of how sensory input and clothing adaptations can impact a child's comfort, focus, and ability to participate in daily activities."

The comprehensive product line includes weighted vests that provide proprioceptive input, compression shirts available in both long and short sleeves for consistent sensory support, and seamless socks designed to eliminate irritating seams. Each item incorporates specific design elements such as tag-free construction, soft fabrics, and strategic compression zones based on occupational therapy principles. The medical adaptive clothing collection addresses practical needs for children requiring G-tube access, specialized medical blankets, and clothing that accommodates various medical equipment and procedures.

Beyond individual garments, Kozie Clothes has developed a complete ecosystem of support for families navigating sensory and medical challenges. The company's accessory line includes weighted blankets and specialized toys designed to complement the clothing offerings and provide additional sensory input options. These products work together to create comprehensive sensory solutions that can be customized to each child's unique needs and preferences.

The company has also implemented customer-focused initiatives including a rewards program that allows families to earn points toward future purchases, recognizing that specialized clothing often represents a significant ongoing expense for families. Gift cards provide an option for extended family and friends to contribute to a child's wardrobe needs, while free shipping on orders over $100 helps reduce the overall cost burden for families requiring multiple specialized items.

Since its founding, Kozie Clothes has established itself as a resource for families seeking clothing solutions that combine therapeutic effectiveness with practical daily wear. The company maintains its commitment to innovation through ongoing collaboration with occupational therapists, parents, and medical professionals to ensure products meet evolving needs. Custom solutions remain available for children with unique requirements not addressed by standard product offerings.
