

ACSGW To Reopen After Upgrade, Celebration Set For April 24

April 19, 2016

April 19, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Adventist Comm Services-Washington has announced that they will soon reopen and the celebration of the event has been set for April 24, 2016. The Adventist Community Service of Greater Washington (ACSGW) has been serving in the Washington DC metro region for more than 33 years and is powered by the promise of helping people help themselves. The event is set to take place at the ACSGW facilities in Washington, DC.

Ken Flemmer, ACSGW's director states, "Using a holistic approach, ACSGW helps the disadvantaged and disenfranchised in the community by supporting their physical, social and mental well-being through compassionate emergency care, life education and community development in order to promote self-sufficiency and independence."

With the laser focus on people, facility maintenance was secondary. However, some plumbing emergencies gave fresh impetus to restore and renovate this special place. The upgrades have been completed and ACSGW invites the community to come celebrate its renewed possibilities.

Flemmer has shared his personal vision, saying that ACSGW can help youth and adults see a personal positive future and help equip them to realize that future. "For some the most urgent future is adequate food for the family, or clothing to keep warm. Once that future is reality, they need to be guided and equipped with skills needed for success in life and the workplace," he states.

Flemmer goes on to say that the organization fully believes that having a respectable facility is an important piece of reality. It conveys a positive and uplifting aura. He says that if a building is shabby with signs of neglect it suggests that the programs and services are of similar quality.

The organization states that their upcoming special day will be shared by many community leaders representing the Takoma Park mayor, local county council, along with Maryland state officials. Supporting church officials, and sport celebrities will also be in attendance.

Anyone interested in learning more about the event can visit ACSGW on their official website, where information can be found about attendees, times, and the specifics for the upcoming event. Those interested in learning more about the organization and the community services that they provide can also find information on their official website.
