

BC Exteriors LLC Shares Guidance on Roof Damage Insurance Claims for Michigan Homeowners

May 14, 2026

FENTON, MI - May 14, 2026 -
BC Exteriors LLC, a GAF Master Elite Roofing Contractor serving Fenton, Linden, and surrounding Michigan communities, has outlined key considerations for homeowners dealing with potential roof damage from storms. The company draws from its experience assisting local property owners with insurance processes following weather events common in the state, such as high winds, hail, and heavy precipitation.

Michigan homeowners frequently encounter roof issues after storms, including displaced shingles, damaged flashing, or interior leaks. BC Exteriors LLC recommends a structured approach to assessment and documentation before initiating insurance claims. This process helps property owners understand coverage options and avoid common pitfalls that can lead to claim denials or insufficient payouts.

The first recommended step involves thorough documentation of any visible damage. Homeowners should capture photographs or video from the ground immediately after an event, noting items such as shingles in the yard, dings on gutters or vents, water stains on ceilings, granule accumulation in gutters, or areas of sagging or bubbling on the roof surface. Many forms of damage, however, remain difficult to detect without professional evaluation.

BC Exteriors LLC advises consulting a local roofing professional prior to contacting an insurance provider. This sequence allows for a complete inspection using tools such as drone footage to identify hidden issues. Such assessments provide homeowners with accurate information on the extent of damage, whether it meets policy thresholds, and the viability of a claim. Proceeding without this step can result in underestimation of repairs or claims falling below deductibles.

Insurance policies vary significantly across carriers and individual plans. Some offer replacement cost value coverage, while others apply actual cash value with depreciation considerations. Certain policies limit wind damage claims unless tied to specific storm intensities. BC Exteriors LLC personnel have worked with major Michigan carriers and can help clarify policy language during consultations, though final determinations rest with the insurer and adjuster.

The company cautions against engaging out-of-area contractors that appear in neighborhoods after major storms. These operations sometimes employ aggressive tactics or make promises that complicate the claims process. Local firms with established community presence typically maintain offices, permit easy follow-up, and focus on long-term client relationships.

When proceeding with a claim, professional documentation supports interactions with insurance adjusters. BC Exteriors LLC participates in meetings as needed, supplies detailed reports, and guides clients through each phase from initial inspection to project completion. The emphasis remains on factual assessments tailored to the property's condition and the homeowner's specific situation.

Chad Beard, owner of BC Exteriors LLC, addressed the value of pre-claim evaluations. "A professional inspection before filing provides homeowners with clear details on damage extent and potential coverage, enabling more informed decisions about next steps," said Beard.

Beard added perspective on local service practices. "Our team focuses on accurate documentation and transparent communication throughout the insurance process, helping Michigan residents navigate claims without unnecessary complications," he stated.
