

Longmont Braces Reinforces Commitment to Comprehensive Orthodontic Care Across All Age Groups

June 04, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - June 04, 2026 -

Longmont Braces continues to strengthen its position as a leading provider of individualized orthodontic treatment in Longmont, Colorado, maintaining its dedication to patient-centered care through diverse treatment options and modern orthodontic approaches. The practice, led by Dr. Stephanie Ross and Dr. Aden Peterson, emphasizes the importance of personalized treatment planning that addresses the unique needs of children, teenagers, and adults seeking orthodontic care.

The practice has observed growing demand for orthodontic services across all age demographics, with an increasing number of adult patients pursuing treatment alongside traditional pediatric and adolescent cases. This trend reflects broader changes in orthodontic care accessibility and the development of more discreet treatment options that appeal to working professionals and adults who previously may have postponed orthodontic treatment.

Dr. Stephanie Ross, who leads the clinical team at Longmont Braces, emphasizes the importance of individualized care in achieving optimal treatment outcomes. "Every patient presents with unique orthodontic needs, lifestyle considerations, and treatment goals," said Dr. Ross. "Our approach centers on developing customized treatment plans that not only address clinical requirements but also align with each patient's personal circumstances and preferences. This commitment to personalized care ensures that whether a patient is seven or seventy, they receive treatment that fits seamlessly into their life."

The practice offers a comprehensive range of treatment modalities, including traditional metal and clear braces, Invisalign clear aligner therapy, dentofacial orthopedics, surgical orthodontics, two-phase treatment plans, and temporary anchorage devices. This diverse array of options enables the clinical team to address varying degrees of orthodontic complexity, from minor tooth alignment issues to more complex cases requiring coordinated surgical intervention.

For younger patients, the practice provides early intervention options through two-phase treatment plans and dentofacial orthopedics, which can guide facial growth and development during critical developmental periods. These approaches can often reduce the complexity of future treatment needs and improve overall facial harmony. Adult patients, meanwhile, frequently gravitate toward aesthetic options such as clear braces or Invisalign aligners that allow them to pursue orthodontic treatment without significant impact on their professional appearance.

The practice also maintains emergency orthodontic care services for existing patients experiencing urgent issues, recognizing that orthodontic emergencies can occur unexpectedly and require prompt attention to prevent treatment disruption or patient discomfort.

Longmont Braces has implemented extended consultation sessions that allow adequate time for patient education and treatment planning discussions. These comprehensive consultations ensure patients fully understand their orthodontic condition, available treatment options, expected timelines, and financial considerations before beginning treatment.

Longmont Braces is an established orthodontic practice in Longmont, Colorado, founded by Dr. Stephanie Ross. The practice specializes in providing orthodontic treatment for patients of all ages, utilizing both traditional and contemporary treatment methodologies to achieve optimal clinical outcomes while prioritizing patient comfort and satisfaction.
